

NAZI 'SUICIDE TANKS' ARE ISOLATED

Italy Will Be at War in Week

German Offensive Rolls to New Area, High Officers Say

Official Report Does Not Give Any Specific Details of Terrific Battle in France

Cherbourg Is Hit

French Port Is Raided by German Planes, Is Report

Berlin, June 8 (AP)—Germany's offensive along the Somme River is rolling forward successfully with new ground gained on the lower Somme, the high command announced today, but the official report failed for the third successive day to give specific details of the terrific fighting in northern France.

The Nazi air force was reported taking a big hand in the operations, bombing troop concentrations behind the French lines.

Other developments listed in the communiqué were:

The number of prisoners taken at Dunkerque, originally placed at 40,000 then 58,000, has risen to 88,000.

A German submarine sank an enemy auxiliary cruiser of 14,000 tons off northwest Ireland.

The air force renewed attacks on Dover Harbor and airports of the southland east coasts of England.

Ten civilians were killed in Allied air raids on one German city but generally little damage was caused by the continued raids.

Two Paragraphs Only

Two paragraphs covered the immense battle in France.

"Our operations south of the Somme and the Aisne canal continue to proceed satisfactorily," the communiqué said. "On the southern lower Somme also the enemy was pushed back."

"The air force supporting the army fighting on the southern Somme successfully bombed with strong forces troop concentrations, columns of infantry and artillery positions."

The lack of details in the high command's communiqué was said in informed circles to be in line with the command's policy of not giving the enemy "a clearer picture of the situation." However, it was said the advance was proceeding on schedule.

Acknowledging only five German losses, the high command said the allies yesterday lost 71 airplanes—29 shot down in air fights, 25 brought down by anti-aircraft guns and the others destroyed on the ground.

On the Norwegian front, Nazi fliers supporting ground forces near Narvik, Norway's arctic iron ore port, were said to have set a tank camp afire in an attack on allied positions to have scored two hits with heavy bombs on a cruiser.

The Nazi air force was said to have played a major part in yesterday's German gains along a front extending more than 60 miles eastward from the English channel.

Targets of Raids

Allied troop concentrations and traffic lanes both immediately behind the front and in the hinterland were the main targets of "successful" raids, spokesman said. German warplanes also showered the French port of Cherbourg with bombs, he declared, while Essex and other regions on the southern and southeastern coasts of England were again "visited" by Nazi bombers.

Volkischer Beobachter said the French were fighting "bravely and stubbornly to hold their lines," but said the German attackers nevertheless were making headway.

The French were quoted as saying they were withdrawing from advance positions.

The high command failed to tell a public clamoring for news how far the German drive had carried.

German war analysts, amplifying official reports, said Nazi attackers had found the French line along the Somme-Aisne front "spongy." They agreed, however, that the allied commander-in-chief, General Maxime Weygand, had made excellent strategic use of available terrain in mapping his defenses.

They explained that the chief characteristic of the French line was its "mattress-like" ability to absorb blows, yielding at the point of impact but slowly bringing the thrust to a halt.

Action along the Somme-Aisne front absorbed public attention almost to the exclusion of developments elsewhere.

Forecast Is June 13, 14 Likely Time

Six Reasons Are Given Explaining Abroad Why Italy Will Enter Conflict

(By the Associated Press)

Rome, June 8.—Italy's entrance into the war against Great Britain and France within a week was forecast today in usually well-informed sources.

These informants said Italian action probably would start on the night of June 13 or June 14—next Thursday or Friday—after an announcement by Premier Mussolini after Italy has moved.

This seemed to preclude the possibility of a speech by Il Duce Monday as rumored in Switzerland.

"The Italian people are on the eve of a solemn event," declared Relazione Internazionale, authoritative Fascist weekly, which, it said, will be a "war of supreme independence."

It echoed Mussolini's motto: "Better to live a day as a lion than a hundred years as sheep."

For the sake of foreigners, the weekly said, it listed six reasons why Italy is going to war.

Italy has followed a peace policy for 18 years seeking to "balance positions, shorten distances and impose new, more humane political formulas."

France and England always have opposed Mussolini's policies. When the "Italian people asked for land to work they were offered deserts."

Italy Is Undervalued

"Everything Italian, in domestic policy as well as in the international field, has been ostentatiously undervalued by the French and English."

"Democratic Europe, which has deprecated the Italian people, can only be fought. The Italian people have reached the limit of their patience. . . . This war must solve territorial questions for the Italian people which are nice, Corsica, Tunisia and Jibuti."

"The life of the Italian people is subject to French and English control. Italy must insure her independence on the sea."

A report that former Premier Pierre Laval, of France, is in Rome trying to reach an Italo-French settlement persisted today but, as always for the last month, it was denied in French circles.

Both the French and Italian officials remained silent on what negotiations have gone on between them but it was clear from authoritative Italian comment that French concessions were made too late.

The British and French are expected to issue a white paper on the negotiations with Italy whenever she enters the war.

Italian commercial air service to foreign destinations was curtailed today as delays in shipping schedules and the departure of troops for the south strengthened belief that the nation may soon

Nazis Shatter French Plans German Circles Say Present Campaign Does Not Allow Warfare Along Old Method of Fixed Fortifications

Berlin, June 8 (AP)—The German army's new western campaign has "definitely shattered French hopes" of conducting warfare from fixed positions, informed German circles said today.

Following a break-through all along the Somme-Aisne line yesterday, these sources said, the Nazi steamroller is again in motion and Blitzkrieg tactics which proved so successful in Poland, Holland and Belgium have been resumed.

Although the German advance was described as proceeding on schedule, there was no official information concerning the points reached, and today's high command report was not expected to make any "premature revelations," it was said.

The high command's policy, informed persons added, was intended to "avoid giving the enemy a clearer picture of the situation."

Congress Might Give Speedy Approval to Defense Levies

Defense Tax Bill Hits Lower Incomes

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Here is how the administration's new $1,006,000,000 defense tax bill would hit various American taxpayers' pocket-books:

A married man with a $3,000 net taxable income and no dependents, who now pays a tax of $8, would pay $30.80. A single man with the same income, would pay $83.60, instead of $68.

In other representative income brackets, the tax on married men would be as follows:

Income	Present Tax	Proposed Tax
$ 5,000	$ 45	$ 116.00
10,000	415	714.00
25,000	2,489	3,842.40
50,000	8,869	14,128.40
100,000	22,463	43,476.00
500,000	304,144	342,412.40
1,000,000	679,044	754,824.40

Governor Reports State Guard Would Replace Nationals

New Unit Would Substitute for 26,000 Men Enrolled in Groups and Would Be Given Arms

New York, June 8 (AP)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman says a "New York state guard" will be mobilized to substitute for the state's 26,000 national guardsmen if the latter, or 75 per cent of them, are called to active duty.

The new armed unit would be similar to one formed during the world war, the governor said after a conference yesterday with Republican and Democratic legislative leaders.

No special legislative session would be necessary in connection with the defense program, he said, adding that the legislative leaders had agreed that the governor and himself could handle emergency steps quickly under present statutes.

The governor said that in the past few days he had received many letters from men, some of them veterans of the last war, volunteering to serve in a state guard.

Authorization of defense spending was the one issue that might have forced calling a special session, and legislators clarified this by agreeing to issuance of "certificates of intent" to pay the 500 national guardsmen already called to guard the state's armories.

This means the amount will be included in the next budget and passed without opposition.

Participants in the conference, at the governor's New York apartment, were three Republicans, Oswald D. Heck, speaker of the assembly; Joe R. Hanley, Senate majority leader, and Irving M. Ives, assembly majority leader; three Democrats, Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti, Irwin Steingut, assembly minority leader.

Passage Next Wednesday in House Is Expected; Receipts Will Go to Special Fund

Washington, June 8 (AP)—An election-year tax bill to tap the rich, the poor and the man in between for another billion a year to pay off defense loans moved with emergency speed today toward congressional approval.

The measure, written by a House ways and means subcommittee yesterday, was expected to be approved by the full committee today and to pass the House by next Wednesday.

Administration leaders want to push the bill through the Senate finance committee by next week-end and dispatch it to President Roosevelt a few days later.

The measure, broadening the tax base, raising the levies on corporations and middle-bracket individuals and imposing a flat 10 per cent super-tax on all, is designed to pay off $4,000,000,000 of special defense bonds over the next five years.

Mr. Roosevelt already has asked Congress for about $4,600,000,000 in defense outlays, for which bonds would be issued. The bill would raise the debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $49,000,000,000 to make possible the bond issue.

Special Fund

Tax receipts from the new bill would be placed in a special fund to be used only to liquidate the defense debt.

A provision lowering present income tax exemptions from $2,500 to $2,000 for married persons and from $1,000 to $800 for single persons would become permanent, however, as would higher surtaxes on incomes between $6,000 and $100,000.

Many who escape the direct income levies will help pay the defense bill through a 10 per cent increase in practically all excise levies on manufactured articles. This raise is applicable only through 1945.

The lower exemptions will require about 2,050,000 additional individuals to make a direct tax contribution.

A single man with a $2,500 salary now pays $50 in taxes and his bill would be increased to $63.80. A married man without children and a salary of $3,000, now paying $8, would pay $30.80 and a married man with one child and a $3,500 salary, now paying $10, would pay $33.

The higher surtaxes would start in the $6,000-to-$8,000 bracket, with an increase from 5 to 6 per cent. The greatest increase would be from 27 to 40 per cent in the brackets between $44,000 and $50,000.

Boy Is Hurt Badly When Hit by Car

John Sheridan, 5, Runs From Behind Truck Into Churchwell Car

John Sheridan, 5, of Hurley, was critically injured about 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon when he was knocked down by an automobile driven by Frank Churchwell of 124 Wilbur avenue. The boy underwent an operation for a skull fracture at the Kingston Hospital this morning, and his condition was reported as serious.

According to the report made to the police department by Mr. Churchwell he was driving over Spring street yesterday and when near the intersection of Hudson street the boy ran out from behind a truck directly in front of his car and was knocked down.

Mr. Churchwell picked up the injured boy and rushed him to the hospital.

The child at the time of the accident was visiting at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Millett, of 182 West Pierpoint street.

Army Turns Over Fast Pursuit Plane to Ford Motor Interests

Issue in Milton Fire Truck Case To Affect State

Justice Russell Reserves Decision on Motion by Counsel to Reduce Rate of Interest

Decision on an issue arising from the verdict of May 3 against the Milton Fire District "will affect the entire state of New York" Supreme Court Justice Pierce H. Russell said yesterday in reserving answer on a motion made before him.

The Milton Fire District, as defendant, it was learned, will appeal the $15,000 verdict which resulted from the $100,000 action brought by Michael Nardone, an executor of the estate of Anthony Fanezzi, Milton grill proprietor.

Fanezzi was killed June 19, 1939, when the Milton Fire Department truck crashed after its driver, Chief Thiel, according to witnesses, lost control of the machine.

George Rusk, counsel for the fire district, appeared before Justice Russell and moved for a reduction of the interest rate, which has been taxed by the county clerk. In taxing the costs, etc., the clerk taxed interest costs on the verdict at the usual rate of 6 per cent.

Mr. Rusk argued that the rate should be 4 per cent as allowed by statute for interest in "public improvement" and that the 6 per cent rate should be reduced by 2 per cent.

The lawyer cited a section of the General Municipal Law which holds that 4 per cent is the legal rate for "public improvements," and he said that the fire department was a public improvement in the meaning of the law and could not be charged the 6 per cent.

A fire department, he argued, came under the term of municipal public improvements in the same manner as would a sewer or other village improvement and under the law he held the rate of interest should be 4 per cent.

It developed during the argument.

Officials Will Study Possibility Planes May Be Turned Out 1,000 per Day

Washington, June 8 (AP)—The army put one of its fastest pursuit planes at Henry Ford's disposal today to let him determine whether his mass production genius can get aerial fighters rolling off assembly lines at the amazing rate of 1,000 a day.

The sudden completion of arrangements to have the pursuit equipment delivered to Ford engineers in Detroit Monday momentarily distracted defense program attention from the sharp cleavage of congressional opinion on President Roosevelt's applause for a newspaper editorial urging compulsory military training for the nation.

The unofficial debate on compulsory training, however, was off to a heated start, and there were indications of additional legislative dissension over administration plans which would, in effect, make a large amount of World War equipment available for Allied purchase by turning it back to the manufacturers.

Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday that the arms and munitions stores were deteriorating but that they still had an immediate value. Although he did not specify the size of the stores, unofficial military estimates were that enough rifles to supply an army of almost 2,000,000 might be turned out.

The announcement that a pursuit plane would be sent to Detroit, was made by the war department last night. Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson said that Henry Ford had telegraphed a request to see the ship "as soon as possible."

Ford, pioneer in automotive mass production, asserted two weeks ago that, given certain conditions, his plants in six months time could turn out 1,000 standard-type planes daily.

A day or two after his father spoke, Edsel Ford came to Washington to confer with Treasury Secretary Morgenthau, coordinator of domestic and Allied purchases of military aircraft.

Mass Production Discussed

At that time, Morgenthau said, they discussed the possibility of putting Ford plants into mass production.

British Form New Land Divisions To Assist France

Daily Mail Calls Night Raids by Germany an Attempt to Strike Terror Into People

London, June 8 (AP)—Aerial blows, struck and received, form Britain's share of warfare while new land divisions are being organized and equipped for the battle in France.

For the third successive night, German air raiders carried the war into the south and east coast countries of England last night in a series of attacks marked by machine-gunning of houses at the southeast port town.

The Daily Mail described these latest assaults as "terror raids."

A communiqué of the air ministry and the ministry of home security said "some bombs were dropped but little material damage was done and no casualties have been reported."

One Nazi bomber crashed and burned in East Suffolk. One member of its crew was reported killed, another injured and one captured. The injured flier later died. The captured German flier struggled with police declaring he wanted to keep on fighting.

While anti-aircraft units blazed away at the raiders, the Royal Air Force bore the weight of British support for her French ally.

Refineries Are Fired

The air ministry said last night that R. A. F. bombers ranged the full length of the German lines and behind the lines in northern France, setting fires at a large oil refinery south of Hamburg, smashing one end of a main railway tunnel south of Aachen and slashing at German-held air-dromes, rail lines, marching troops and motorized columns.

Air rail alarms echoed last night in ten English coastal counties.

The machine-gunning plane which struck at the unidentified coast town did not drop bombs but circled repeatedly at a low altitude.

French Say Nazis Reach Carlepoint

Fighting Ranges From Channel to the Aisne River; Artillery Duel Is in Progress

Nazi Push Fails

German Attempt to Cross Aisne Near Soissons Fails

Paris, June 8 (AP)—Rolling German fortresses, dubbed by French military commentators "suicide tanks," crashed through the allied lines near Forges-Les-Eaux, about 30 miles southeast of the channel port of Dieppe, today, only to be isolated as successive lines of French and British closed behind them, the French reported.

Forges-Les-Eaux is 12 miles south of the Bresle river and nearly 40 miles from Abbeville on the Somme where the right wing action of the German offensive started three days ago. The town is 25 miles northeast of Rouen.

The French war ministry admitted that the Nazi push, aimed at the center of the French defenses guarding the broad Oise valley which leads to Paris, had reached Carlepoint, only 53 miles northeast of Paris yesterday.

(The French government radio estimated that 400 German tanks were destroyed yesterday. This would make 800 of Germany's original force of 2,000 reported destroyed since the battle of the Somme began.)

Results Are Undiscovered

The results of the drive against Forges-Les-Eaux were still undisclosed here, but military commentators said the allies were engaged in "a tank hunt," aimed at annihilation of machines and crews.

Along the rest of the 125-mile front from the channel to the Maginot Line waves of (one word censored) defense posts were withdrawing in the central zone between Amiens and Ham.

Fighting ranged from the channel west of Trepport, to the Aisne river, where the Eastern end of the combat zone was marked by the villages of Bourg and Comin at the junction of the Oise-Aisne canal.

Between there and the Maginot Line German batteries kept up their artillery bombardment, drawing fire from the French gunners.

German attempts yesterday to cross the Aisne east of Soissons failed completely, military advisers said. Resumption of fighting today began north of Soissons where the French continued to hold their positions on the north bank of the Aisne.

Northwest of Soissons advance guards battled on the north bank of the Oise. Fighting was particularly heavy in the glades of the Ourcamp forest.

Allied aviation continued to attack German tank and motorized columns with bombs and aerial canon. Hundreds of tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on German rear guards, causing enormous losses, Paris advisers said.

Weygand at Front

With General Weygand himself at the front, the French troops which withdrew to new positions along the Aisne River, on the eastern part of the northern France battle line, carried out his command for strategic withdrawal in perfect order, the spokesman said.

He added that they took up their re-established line only after having fulfilled their mission of harrying the German tanks.

The military reporter said the French estimated the Nazis have about two-thirds of all their available tanks in action at present along the Somme-Aisne front.

The French defenses are holding and isolating the motorized spearheads, he declared, while artillery and infantry on both sides clashed in front line battles.

The combat was renewed this morning with full violence but the French high command was reported "satisfied" with the progress of the fighting.

Paris heard anti-aircraft fire at 11:31 a. m. (5:31 a. m. E. S. T.). The firing ceased after a few shots.

Two divisions of German tanks—between 800 and 1,000—were said to have been brought as reinforcements from Abbeville, near the mouth of the Somme, to the central front.

French 75's continued to blast the rolling fortresses, the spokesman said. He declared that a single battery of these famous

Pink and Blue Garden On Formal Plan

A favorite color combination, and one which is just as pleasing in midsummer as in the cool spring, is pink and blue. If you like these colors, and have a suitable space somewhere in your home grounds a small formal garden like the one illustrated will make an attractive picture throughout the summer.

In the center may be a small pool in which birds can drink and bathe, or a bird bath, sundial, fountain or any similar feature. Around it a ribbon planting of dwarf sweet alyssum is suggested, though this planting might also be of lobelia, or ever a dwarf marigold, preferably of a pale orange or yellow, a suggestion of yellow is always welcome with either pink or blue.

The outside border of this garden should be planted in a blue tone, and there is no better material available than ageratum. The four center beds may be planted alternately with pink and blue, or more accurately purple, petunias. These accommodating flowers give the most reliable color masses with the least care. It is not necessary to keep the faded flowers picked off, and the plants sheared back, in order to keep new blossoms opening.

Of course the so-called blue petunias are not really blue, and neither is ageratum. In fact, there are few blue flowers. Nearly all have enough red in their pigmentation to make them purple, or lavender; but it is convenient to group them all together as members of the blue family, where the blue dominates. For a good effect in such a garden as this, one must be sure to sow good, well fixed varieties. Remarkable progress has been made in recent years in breeding alyssum, petunias and ageratum, to produce dwarf, compact plants, well covered with blooms of uniform color.

Early morning is the best time to sprinkle the lawn. A thorough wetting is best; it promotes deep rooting in contrast to the shallow root system of grass lightly sprinkled.

Ancient Arabian Legend Is Linked to Meteorite

A slice of a meteorite which, according to an ancient Arabian legend, was a block of gold when it fell to earth and was twice changed by God—once to silver and finally to iron—as a punishment to tribes who quarreled over its possession, has been acquired by the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. It has been placed on exhibition in that institution's collection of meteorites, the largest such collection in the world.

The authentic history of this meteorite, known as the Tameitit iron, although not as strange as the "Arabian Nights" type of tales told about it by the natives of the region where it fell, is nevertheless also extraordinary. It arrived on the earth hundreds of years ago near the Tameitit oasis in the Toud, Sahara desert, and it is the oldest iron meteorite, actually seen while falling, which has been preserved.

"For hundreds of years this meteorite has been the mascot of the people of the Tameitit oasis, and if we could only believe all that is told of it in an old, undated Arabian manuscript it would be the most extraordinary object in this or any other museum," claims an official of the museum.

Successful marriage is not a gift of nature but an art, Dr. Henry Bowman, professor of sociology at Stephens college in St. Louis, Mo., says, and there is little truth in the popular notions that badly prepared meals and curl-papers are leading causes for wife desertion. "Many a fine marriage has been built on piles of burned toast," Dr. Bowman says. "A successful marriage requires patience, understanding, insight, information and idealization. Whether a husband is cleanly shaven or whether his wife looks pretty at the breakfast table doesn't count for much in making the marriage go."

It's as easy to get along with a husband or a wife as it is to get along with any other person, he says. Jealousy, a desire to dominate and a lack of understanding of the matter are at the top of his list of destructive elements.

First Hymnbook in U. S. Mrs. Florence Bronson Hays of Gasport, N. Y., owns a copy of what she believes was the first hymnbook printed in the United States. The author and publisher was Oliver Bronson, an ancestor of Mrs. Hays. He was a distinguished composer and teacher of sacred music during colonial times, and general master of the colonial militia. The book carries an inscription which says: "A new collection of Sacred Hymns containing a set of Psalm Tunes, Hymns and Anthems; likewise the necessary rules of psalmody, by Oliver Bronson, Sinsbury, Conn. Printed and sold by the author at his house, 1783."

Local Man Finds Raising of Canaries Engrossing Hobby

Start With Trio Leads to Raising Of 330 Since 1935

Irving Roe, Hurley Avenue Resident, Has Specially Built Quarters for Birds in Yard

Nature's musical best comes from the mighty efforts of the tiniest creatures and the vocal champion of them all is among the smallest—the ambitious, generous canary.

Song and sunshine seem to remain synonymous agents of good cheer, and a perfect picture then is that combination of a singing canary in a sun-filled room.

Add to that, any one of these spring days with its chorus of warbling, wild birds outside, and you have the symphonic utmost of the season.

Even this, however, has room for improvement, as you might learn from Irving Roe of 84 Hurley avenue, whose hobby made him "Keeper of the Canaries."

In his bird chorus are about 150 warblers of which are the stage daily, singing variety. These stage daily, spontaneous operas in a small, attractive house built especially for the breeding season some of the prima donnas will have mothered a few more voices into the choral effect.

Began With Trio

It all began, Mr. Roe explains, in 1935, when on the advice of a friend he brought home two singers and later added a female. He raised only three birds the first year, but within another year there were 12.

The following year Mr. Roe raised 89 birds and the next year 150. He now estimates that with good luck during this breeding season he will have raised a total of 330 birds for the five years. The breeding time starts in February and lasts until June.

First eggs are laid from seven to 10 days after the birds are mated and the mating time generally lasts for about 13 days. After the young are hatched, they are fed by both the mother and father, each resigning themselves to the task of caring for the young until they are ready to go on their own after about a month.

Balanced Diet Given

A balanced diet is fed the birds during the mating season, consisting of a food containing cod liver oil, cracked meal, corn meal, rolled oats, a substance containing boiled eggs, another with charcoal, and others with egg shells, oyster shells and grit. The diet includes also plenty of water, greens and the cuttle bone.

The general feedings at times other than the breeding season is comparatively simple. It consists of a pound and a half of hard seed a day, 10 boiled eggs, one and a half quarts of water and a quart of food of balanced food.

It takes an average of two hours each day for feeding and general care; one hour in the morning and another again in the late afternoon.

Mr. Roe makes all his own cages and general equipment for the bird house. The cages are of the box type and some of the larger ones contain from six to 10 birds.

House Neatly Finished

Equipment in the bird house includes a cabinet for keeping records for each bird, an oil-burning stove, vacuum cleaner, electric lights and chairs for visitors. The place is as neat and as comfortable as a Dutch kitchen and serves as a retreat for the owner to sit and read or listen to the radio. It is lined with metal and is decorated with plants and window boxes for greens.

Through cross breeding, Mr. Roe has on hand about every known color common to the canary. There are the familiar yellows and greens, the more uncommon whites, the blues, cinnamons and fawns. There are also the combinations of yellow and green, blue and white, cinnamon and white, cinnamon and yellow and fawn and white.

Many of these types include the crested birds which are known also as top-knots and there are the hybrids known as mules which are a cross of the gold finch male and canary female.

Records Kept

Records are kept on all birds from the time the eggs are laid until some time after they are hatched. Bands are put on the legs with numbers to allow a complete tracing of their records.

Mr. Roe indicates that he intends doing considerable further experimenting and he hopes sometime to turn out about every type but that one referred to humorously by Bugs Baer as the "canary birds who sing bass."

An occasional sale of a bird helps defray feeding expenses, Mr. Roe explains, but the venture has been more the outgrowth of a hobby than any serious attempt at commercializing the idea. Someday, however, he indicated, he may launch forth more seriously and build larger quarters with a view to marketing the birds.

Surprised at Growth

Mrs. Roe, who is as surprised as her husband at the manner in which this hobby grew, said that she looked out in the back one day and saw two or three canaries. "A while later when I looked," she added, "there seemed to be a million there."

A canary of the wild species seen in this region has been singing recently near the Roe home. It is an excellent singer, Mr. Roe reports, and he is hopeful of producing it with a view to producing

Life Is One Song After Another in This Aviary

The canary population of a small, white structure in the backyard of the home of Irving Roe of 84 Hurley avenue is now slightly over 150. It will be somewhat larger by the end of the current breeding season and some day may expand to an extent where larger quarters an interesting type by crossing it with one of the tame birds. This hobby, says Mr. Roe, has many more interesting possibilities than he thought at first and he finds his interest growing with each day. It helps make life something of a song, at least, he indicated.

Townsend Glee Club Gives Concert at Poughkeepsie

The Kingston Townsend Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Mildred Niles, gave a concert on Wednesday evening at Knights of Pythias Hall, Poughkeepsie. The program consisted of both classical and semi-classical numbers, anthems, patriotic and folk songs, as well as some of the more popular numbers of the day.

Among the outstanding features were the soprano solo work of Miss Mildred Niles, Mrs. Jane Ballard and Mrs. Ethel Osborne, the contralto solo work of Mrs. Alice MacDonald, the alto arrangements sung by Miss Margaret Zeff and the bass solo work of E. T. Ritch.

This recital attracted large audiences both at Poughkeepsie and at Newburgh on May 23. The Glee Club director has booked several engagements for this concert to be given after the national convention June 30 to July 4, in St. Louis, Mo.

He has been ill but is now reported better. Commencement will be held Friday evening, June 21, at 8:30 o'clock in Firemen's Hall. A play is in the making. There will be other interesting numbers besides the big attraction of all—the eight grade boys and girls getting their diplomas from the board of trustees.

The annual picnic will be held on Friday, June 14, at Williams Lake. All members of the club and friends of the school are invited to go with us. Anyone who has extra space in his car will be helping if he will donate that space to someone who has no means of transportation. This picnic is sponsored by the Mothers' Club. The teachers and pupils are appreciative of the many things the club does for the good of the school and its members.

The Junior Club of the intermediate room enjoyed a hot dog roast May 20.

Four young musicians play in recitals in Kingston this month. They are: Florence Ransom and Dorothy Jacobs in the recital given by the pupils of Roger Baer; and Natalie Simpson and Patricia Davenport in the recital by pupils of Walter Kidd.

The school entered nine posters in the contest, held under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, to advertise their annual flower show.

Wingate Hart played in the drum corps which is sponsored by the American Legion, Memorial Day in Kingston.

Regents will be held in the school June 17, 18 and 19.

Boss Buys a Yacht

St. Louis (AP)—The boss has bought a yacht—for his employees to use. "I thought it would be nice if they could make trips during the summer," explained Julian R. Burch, president of the Star Manufacturing Company of St. Louis and a big-game hunter and world traveler. The 54-foot, 30-ton power boat will be used by his 65 employees for vacation, week-end and night cruises on the Mississippi. The idea of buying a boat came to Burch when the war interfered with his travel plans.

He has been around the world five times and has made three hunting expeditions to Asia and Africa.

Lunch In A Hurry

Here is a hurry-up supper or luncheon suggestion: Beat 2 eggs, add ½ cup grated cheese and 1 cup of canned cream of mushroom soup, heat in a double boiler until smoking, add a little salt and paprika for extra seasoning and serve over crackers, toast, rusks or boiled rice. This makes enough to serve 3.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Reason Enough

Newington, Conn.—No school children play hockey to enjoy the swimming pool and tennis courts at the municipal park here.

The park caretaker, John Walsh, is also town truant officer.

Guess Again

Emporium, Pa.—A wrong guess in court cost Thomas Penno and his son Fred $200.

The case hinged on an animal liver which the Penos claimed was pork. Game wardens said it was that of a deer.

The prosecution displayed in court a pork and a venison liver and asked the Penos to name them. They missed—and were fined $200 for illegal possession of deer meat.

A First to Everything

Coffeyville, Kas.—Ralph Tuttle, junior college civil aeronautics student, and his mother, Mrs. R. L. Tuttle, celebrated a day of firsts at the airport.

After Ralph received his private pilot's license, his first passenger was his mother. It was her first ride.

Changing Their Address

Oklahoma City—An ambulance crew could find only cuts and bruises on Dewayne Thacker, 15, following an argument between his bicycle and a parked truck.

But they were forced to take both Dewayne and his mother to the hospital when Mrs. Thacker became hysterical as the ambulance stopped in front of their home.

Funny Business

Evansville, Ill.—A swarm of bees is making life miserable at the Robert Babbitt home.

The insects made the chimney their headquarters for reconnoitering flights throughout the house three days this week.

Finally a fire was built in the grate. That repulsed them but it caused almost as much discomfort as the bees. The temperature outdoors was 92—and the Babbitts couldn't open the windows for air since the house had just been painted and the screens were off.

Biting Complaint

Milwaukee—His wife purposely served him with tough steaks after he had all his teeth pulled, Robert M. Goss, an auto mechanic, charged in filing suit for divorce. The couple married in 1916.

Clinic Cuts

Marion, Ind. (AP)—In his 55 years, Robert H. Morris, electrician, says he never has had to call or visit a physician. He doesn't know how he does it, because he says he follows no set health rules.

AMERICANS IN CANADA

With millions of Americans presumably planning to visit Canada this summer, and many of them wondering what sort of reception they will get, this comment from the Montreal Star should be interesting. The Star is giving advice to Canadians.

"The worst possible disservice Canadians can do the Allied cause," it says, "is to antagonize Americans by criticising the attitude of the latter toward the war. Most emphatically it is none of our business, and this fact cannot be too strongly impressed upon our citizens. The attitude of the American government has been more than friendly, as a moment of reflection should serve to convince any thinking individual.

"We want not only to keep but to strengthen this friendship. We can best do this by attending strictly to our own business, and by making all Americans who enter Canada this year, or at any time in the future throughout the war, feel that we have not the slightest desire even to appear to dictate to them or suggest to them what action they, as a free nation, shall take in regard to the war."

This is an admirable and self-respecting statement. The advice given probably will be followed. Canadians are habitually less outspoken, anyway, than our people are, less inclined to offer suggestions and criticism.

As matters stand, the two nations may be expected to get along together very well this summer.

HEALING LAUGHTER

Franklin P. Adams, columnist of "The Conning Tower" and an expert of the "Information Please" radio program, reports that many of his fellow writers say they can't write now because they can't concentrate on anything but the war. To some of them the production of light fiction at this time seems an affront to humanity.

Mr. Adams sympathizes, but does not agree with them. He feels that it "would be better for these persons to write their stories than to be paralyzed by the woes that are depressing all," and that "it is a better time for comedy, by truly comic writers, than ever."

There is much to be said for his view. Forced gaiety and false laughter in a time of anxiety and tragedy are an affront to human intelligence and a mockery of sorrow. True comedy, on the other hand, has a healing virtue and is a support to morale and courage. The Bruce Bairnsfather cartoons of the war of 1914-1918, now going on in the present war, are an example of this. If anyone, out of the bigness of his soul, the power of his native wit, the skill of his training, can produce any genuine laughter today, he should be at it.

PLANE PRODUCTION

It is reassuring to be told by Glenn L. Martin, leading American airplane manufacturer, that there's plenty of production capacity in this country, and the industry is "rainin' to go." We can far exceed the production of Germany, he says, if our government provides a program and a regular flow of orders.

"We can be doing as much in twelve months as Germany has accomplished in the last three years," he adds. "Germany has less production capacity than we have."

He doesn't believe, though, that our airplane industry can reach the vast and steady output of the automobile industry, because the requirements for planes are "more careful and meticulous."

Even so, it looks now as if our present aviation industry, aided by the automobile industry, should be turning out warplanes in satisfactory quantity in a few months.

But if Germany wins an unexpectedly quick and complete victory over the Allies, we may have to concentrate our industrial energies on fighting and bombing planes more than we have ever yet concentrated on any kind of manufacture.

THRIFTY REARMAMENT

Arming a big nation for defense is heavily expensive, at best, in these times. It will necessarily be so in America, because of our high standards of living and wages compared with other countries. Yet there is an economical feature involved which is reassuring. In rearming we shall put our idle hands to work. This in itself may amount to a saving of billions of dollars, if the task is well handled. And the saving in impersonal values from getting millions of Americans back to self-respecting independence may be worth more than the money.

We do not know just how far this re-employment will go. If there are 10,000,000 people out of work, it will not be possible to get all of them actually back to profitable and constructive work. Many must have lost their skills from rusting in idleness. But if several millions of our "lost workers" can be redeemed, through self-respecting jobs, in ways that are valuable to the country in an emergency, the social gain to the nation should be as great as the economic gain to them. For prolonged idleness is a social and economic dry rot which, if not cured, may destroy a nation.

ALLIED POWER

A Moscow newspaper says, regarding relative strength of the warring powers in Europe: "German victories are considerable, but it would be a mistake to presume that they already mean an end of the war. The war potential of the Allies is still great, and also their main forces are not defeated yet."

So maybe Russia will have sense enough to stay out of this war.

And now that the British Tommies are mostly safe back home from Belgium, where do they go from there?

The "law of cycles" means that when you get far enough in the future, you find yourself back in the past.

The greatest evidence of human wisdom is, how intelligent we all are about other people's affairs.

War is an ingenious device whereby a nation can work much harder and get much less for it.

GROWING PAINS AND RHEUMATISM

As youngsters, when we complained of pains in the joints, especially the knees, we were told by our parents and sometimes by physicians that these pains were growing pains and no attention was paid to them.

About twenty years ago young physicians began to tell parents and older physicians that there was no such thing as growing pains; that these pains were due to rheumatism and that infected teeth and tonsils should be removed at once if severe attacks of rheumatism and heart disease were to be avoided.

That many painful joints are due to rheumatism and cause heart disease is true but physicians do not believe, any more, that all painful joints are due to rheumatism. It may be true that some that are not due to rheumatism may not be due to growing pains either, but nevertheless in many cases no other cause than the growing of the ends of the bones of the child can be found.

How, then, is a parent or a physician to know whether rheumatism is causing so much pain in the joint or joints that the child cries out whether awake or asleep? This question is of such importance that it formed the subject of an address by Dr. M. J. Shapiro to graduate students in medicine at the University of Minnesota.

The difference between growing pains and rheumatic pains was studied from various standpoints (a) age at onset of pains, (b) time of day when pains occur, (c) location of the pain, (d) signs of rheumatism, (e) changes in appearance of the joint, (f) family history.

In age of onset where growing pains were present, pain begins in early childhood and continues till about time full growth is attained, whereas the rheumatic pains occur most commonly between ages of 6 and 7, often following an attack of sore throat or bronchitis.

As to time of day in growing pains it is at the end of the day, especially during the night, awakening the child. Pain is gone in the morning. Rheumatic pain is felt mostly in the morning, maybe causing a limp; gets better when warmed up or by exercise.

As to exact place where pain occurs; in growing pains it is in the muscles of legs and thighs, and in rheumatism it is in the joints or lower legs.

As to signs, there are no signs whatever in growing pains, pallor, nose bleeds, slight rise in temperature, joints slightly warm and swollen.

As regards family history, growing pains in parents or grandparents was uncommon, but in rheumatism a family history of rheumatic fever was common.

Here It Is! We Asked for It

Well, we asked for it! This heat, we mean. And it was only a short time ago that we were all praying for warm weather. Getting mighty tired of rain, day in and day out, too, and wanted to see Old Sol again. And he was only too willing to see what we got all the heat we could stand, when he finally broke through the clouds.

Now that summer seems to be here to stay, what are you going to do about it? Have you planned any adequate defense against the solar blitzkrieg that already has begun?

If not, here are a few suggestions:
Grab the first train to the North Pole.
Put a 100-pound cake of ice in the bath tub, hop in and forget about reporting at the office until Christmas.

Think about those who really have a tough time of it when heat beats down unmercifully, such as the cop on the beat; highway or shop worker where temperatures try to outdo Hades; countless other jobs that keep workers under broiling sun from morning until night.

Not so tough when you look at it that way, is it?

They Dwell In Marble Halls, Not Knowing Who's The Boss

By JACK STINNETT

Washington.—The nation's capital rapidly is becoming a city of embassies without a country.

In embassy lane—Massachusetts avenue—marble villa after brick chateau is pointed out to visiting firemen as the embassy of a land that is no more and in many of them live men who really are men without countries.

There are six embassies here of lands which have been absorbed by Germany or captured by the Nazis and subjected to a government domination that leaves their ambassadors not knowing for whom they speak, nor to whom they owe allegiance.

The Czechoslovakian flag still flies over the residence of Vladimir Hruban and Mr. Hruban still comes and goes on the business of his state, but where is that state today?

Count Jerzy Potocki still is "His Excellency" when he enters a Washington drawing room and his 16th Street palace still is the recognized center of Polish activity in the United States, but where is Poland? At last report, it was in Angers, France—a strange place for Poland to be as any geography pupil could tell you.

Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, who also lives on the great avenue of nations, represents a nation no longer. Belgium. His cabinet and council is in Paris and has not given up; his King, who appointed him, has; and the United States, which recognizes his credentials, refuses to recognize the conquest of the nation that sent him here.

Ministers In Doubt

Mr. Henrik de Kauffmann's status theoretically has not changed for he is Washington's minister from Denmark—but the status of his country has. When the minister receives an order from Copenhagen today, how can he know whether it comes from the government that appointed him or from some Nazi overlord?

Dr. A. Loudon is another man whose daily problems must cause sleepless nights. Queen Wilhelmina, to whom by oath he owes his all, and her government, are in London; and Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the Austrian Nazi leader, is in supreme command of all the civil functions of the Netherlands.

In a similar plight is Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstjerne, the minister from Norway. The great lobe of the country that he represents and by far the most important section of it from a standpoint of population and industry, is in German hands. At some place which he may know, but which the world at large doesn't, is King Haakon and the Norwegian government. Report has it that Mr. Morgenstjerne himself doesn't know where they are and is in contact with his king only through the embassy in London.

These are the ambassadors and ministers still active in Washington in behalf of their saddled or conquered countries. There is another one whose official status has been turned inside out by recent European upheavals.

Dr. Edgar L. G. Prochnick, whose Austria was among the first to go down the Nazi way, is teaching at Georgetown university. Outwardly he has given up—retired from foreign service—but privately he works and dreams of the day when his land will be free again.

The same undoubtedly could be said for all these other men without countries, but the fact that some still owe allegiance to nations who openly welcomed the Nazis with outstretched arms makes it impossible for them officially to admit anything but that their governments acted wisely and well.

Veteran of these struggles to free little lands from vassalage is Mr. Potocki, who started working for Polish independence 35 years ago when he was 16 years old and now takes up where he left off when the World War struck the shackles from his country.

The social status of these ambassadors without a country is unchanged. Washington still recognizes them as representatives of the nations that appointed them. They still call almost daily at the state department and report or confer on the affairs of the world.

But behind the scenes, they rapidly are becoming the State Department's problem children. Refusing to recognize a conquest is one thing, but when you have to straighten out the affairs of Americans and the United States government in a conquered land, that's another.

Action Over Norton Amendment Shows It Doesn't Pay to Be Faithless in Politics or Lobbying

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, June 8.—It doesn't pay to be faithless, either in politics, lobbying or anything else. The American Federation of Labor entered into an understanding several weeks ago with members of the House labor committee, including its chairman, that the A. F. of L. would support the so-called Norton bill and would virtually abandon its efforts on behalf of other amendments to the Wagner act. The impression was general that the administration forces on Capitol Hill would in return support the A. F. of L. proposal. Then came a letter written by Chairman Norton to a C. I. O. Union confederate that she was not at all interested in the bill that bears her name and didn't want any amendments passed at this session.

Promptly the A. F. of L. went into action. It made peace with the Smith committee, whose original bill had been given the cold shoulder by the A. F. of L. Certain changes in the bill proposed by the majority of the Smith committee were asked for by President Green of the A. F. of L., and now the House approved a modified measure recommended by the committee headed by Representative Smith of Virginia, Democrat, which has been investigating the labor board.

This switch in tactics on the part of the A. F. of L. forced on it by the betrayal of its position has completely altered the outlook for labor legislation at this session. The war psychology also has had much to do with it. This is not a time in which crusaders and zealots can be left in charge of governmental agencies dealing with labor and production. A technical-minded board which is interested in helping unions organize and get members instead of administering a law intended to be faithfully enforced is not going to help, but frustrate national defense. Britain and France can lay the blame for failure to get production going to the interferences of left-wing labor agitators. America has lately had her eyes opened to the many ways in which left-wing strategists bore from within and take advantage of liberal-minded persons who are innocent of such tactics.

Perhaps one of the most significant signs of the times is the way government officials from Attorney General Jackson down are resigning from the National Lawyers Guild because the latter will not rid itself of communistic influences. Many members of the National Labor Relations Board staff have been active in the lawyers' guild. It will be interesting to see whether they go, following the lead of the attorney general and Assistant Secretary of State Berle in disconnecting themselves from such organizations as the lawyers' guild while they are in government employ.

The whole picture here as it relates to the labor situation is changing. The American people do not want to see either labor or management exploited. They do not look with favor on emasculation of the Wagner Act or on the introduction of any barriers to legitimate and proper use of the collective bargaining power. Only when voluntary cooperation is lacking in the ranks of labor and management will more drastic legislation limiting strikes be urged. The general belief is that the labor problem can be handled in the American way—that is without coercion of any kind from any quarter.

During the last war, labor found management not only fair, but leaning over backward to avoid labor troubles. The late Samuel Gompers of the A. F. of L., the greatest labor statesman the world has ever known, steered labor through the war period and America never really was conscious of labor difficulties. Men like William Howard Taft served with him and concurred in his decisions. Today men can be found to handle labor difficulties fairly and objectively as they may touch national defense and production generally.

But fairness on the part of volunteer counselors in the national defense set-up cannot be depended on alone to maintain uninterrupted production. The presence of a law on the statute books which has been interpreted by the labor board in fantastic ways cannot but interfere with the attainment of production goals unless the interpretation or the law changes. The Smith committee amendments are milder in character. They do not propose the subtraction of a single substantive power related to collective bargaining, but they do insure a fair deal of matters of procedure. Even if this does operate to produce some delays, it will, on the other hand, produce a better feeling and a mutual trust without which the benefits of a law cannot be of any avail.

What industry and business need just now is an indication of encouragement from the Congress of the United States about the handling of the labor problem. The fact that the president of the A. F. of L. America's largest labor organization, sets forth his approval of the Smith committee amendments as now modified is proof at least that employers have not been given any advantage in the amendments. The passage by the house of the Smith bill will mean a struggle in the Senate, but it would not be surprising if the measure passed. Though the views of the President will have an important bearing on what happens.

Mr. Roosevelt has not discussed the Wagner act changes and nobody has a right to say he will veto the measure as it finally comes to him. The country is waiting patiently for Congress to remedy the abuses uncovered by the Smith committee which investigated the labor board, and any interference with that objective will certainly not build up confidence among management and producing units, especially at a time of national crisis. Protect Insulation

Lafayette, Ind. (AP)—Small holes are a good thing in outside walls of up-to-date structures, according to results of study of insulating materials at Purdue University. Keeping such insulation dry is one of the problems of builders. Although protected from rain, the insulating materials are subjected to wet vapors which form between walls and vapor pouring over insulation does not wet it seriously unless the vapor is confined. Holes in the outside walls permit escape of the vapor and prevent undesirable wetting. Holes are recommended for outside walls of refrigerator cars for similar reasons.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

You Can Be Stylish All Summer In Soap-And-Water Clothes

By AMY PORTER
(AP Fashion Writer)

This is the biggest soap and water season in fashion history. You can, if you wish, wear nothing but washables all summer.

Typical of smartly-styled city cottons is this jacket dress in pastel plaid gingham. Because it is pre-shrunk, washing won't destroy its nice lines. The crisp finish is permanent, too. It sells for about $12.

long. Come the day of reckoning, you work up a good suds, and into it you toss a dress, a hat, a coat, a necklace, a bag, some underthings, a pair of gloves—wait a minute, not your shoes. Better scrub shoes with a brush instead of soaking them all over.

Advantages of the washable wardrobe are a spic and span fresh-from-the-laundress look; low upkeep, and costumes as smart as any you can buy.

We don't say you'll save money, because that's up to you. You can pay $69.95 for a little gingham suit, or $5, as you wish.

At any price, you'll get a lot for your money. Cottons have come up in the world—for good reasons. Fabrics are more dependable, longer wearing. Usually they are pre-shrunk, with further shrinkage controlled to 1 per cent, so you don't need to fear that your size 12 dress will be size 10 after washing. Most colors are fast. You can look for color and shrinkage guarantees on labels. Best of all, wash dress styling is excellent.

Good styling is a new development in low-priced dresses. Manufacturers discovered, through a survey, that 79 per cent of all dresses retailed for $11 or under, with most of them selling for less than $2. They also learned that women were sick of cheap gaudy styles in inexpensive clothes. Now you can find sound styling in all price lines.

The cotton industry is responsible for much of the new smartness in washables. This industry, on which 12 million people depend for a living, maintains an organization in New York for the sole purpose of making cottons more fashionable. It cleverly advocates the use of "cottony cottons" for summer costumes: regular bed sheeting, overall denim, and mattress ticking.

Striped pique is the best-selling cotton at the moment, with red and white the preferred striping. Gingham, in plaid or checks, ranks second, and seersucker third. Nicely tailored seersucker suits are a boon to the business girl, because they wash easily, dry quickly, and require only lick-and-a-promise ironing.

Attractive washable accessories are tiny pique-bow earrings, slip-cover handbags, adjustable open-crown sunbonnets, and cotton string necklaces and bracelets.

a small cupboard with doors or use part of the regular kitchen cabinet. Of course have the storage space near the outlets.

Do not overload the dining room with ornaments, small tables or wall decorations. A table all set for a meal is very decorative in itself and needs only a simple background. Flowering plants or greenery are always inviting.

To keep the dust from flying when you shake a dust mop, fasten a paper sack over the mop, then discard the sack after you've shaken the mop. This is especially helpful in apartments where it is impossible to shake mops out of doors.

When copper or brass ware become stained and discolored you can clean them like this: Mix 1/3 cup of salt with 1 cup of hot vinegar, apply at once. Rub well and wash the utensil in warm, sudsy water. Wipe dry and polish with a clean soft cloth or a chamois skin.

When your hands become stained from peeling vegetables, dip them in the tea left over from luncheon and wash them in warm water and soap suds. It might pay you to pour leftover tea each day into a jar and keep it near the sink for this purpose.

Strawberry Saver

This applies to new homemakers—most old ones know it: Wash strawberries before removing the hulls. If the hulls are removed before washing much of the juice and flavor will be lost.

For Couples In Business:

(1) Love Your Partner (2) Share The Wealth

By ADELAIDE KERR

AP Feature Service Writer
You've got to be in love and you've got to share the gold supply with your mate if you want to make a modern business-marriage partnership a success.

It takes both, plus respect, to make such a double alliance click, say Atherton Pettingell and Fleur Fenton of New York, who have done it. They share the responsibility of marriage, parenthood of a 7-year-old son, and running an advertising agency—spending almost 24 hours a day together.

Their story is worth your reading because their lives might be yours or mine, and because they have kept their balance on the flying trapeze from which so many moderns have gone sprawling into the net in the circus of 20th century life.

They say the first reason they've been able to do it is because they're in love—and so give each other the kind of consideration and build-up you give only to someone you love.

She respects the way he thinks and coddles him. Chokes back a short answer or anything else which might throw him off the track. He respects her ideas. If she gets a "brainstorm" after the theater and wants to work for two hours—a thing he hates—he sits up and waits for her.

Next reason for the success of their business partnership, they think, is their equal sharing of money. Instead of drawing salaries and having to discuss what they shall be, they choose a certain sum for expenses, place it in a joint account, and both check on it as they need.

Here is a capsule account of the Pettingells' lives.

They met in 1930 while working on the same advertising account in New York and married three months later.

Three years ago they founded their own agency, made a one year excursion into partnership with another concern and then returned to their own business specializing in fashion merchandising accounts.

Their office in a midtown Manhattan building is topped by a three-room apartment—furnished in a modern mixture of Empire decor and pickled pine—to which they often whisk clients for conferences.

They also own a house in Bronxville. They ripped out all the somber furnishings a few years ago and replaced them with sky blue ceilings, sand colored rugs and a pink glass-topped dining table to remind them of their trip to Nassau.

They did it because they thought they would stay at home more if they liked their house better. They do.

He gardens—the digging part, not the fancy work—mostly by floodlight since he has time to work only at night. They also play badminton by floodlight to the amazement of the neighbors. (He gave up golf to play the parent role offener to their son.)

She paints—had a one-woman show in a friend's beauty salon not long ago—and designs her own rings, set with big, odd stones which she picks up on beaches. She also designs many of her own clothes.

When they work they go at it hammer and tongs.

He says a last thing that contributes to their working harmony is the fact that he can "respect her as a man." In spite of her feminine appearance, he says she goes at her work in the straightforward fashion of a man and plays with a give-and-take creed.

Home Service Can Dreams Foreshadow Events In the Future?

Know Psychology of Dreams

What mysterious things dreams are! There's the case of the girl who dreamed she was marrying a strange dark-haired man with kindly gray eyes. Some months later she met such a man and actually married him.

Was her dream forecasting the future? Not exactly, say psychologists. But it does show how subconscious desires and emotions were revealed by our dreams. Subconsciously she had formed a picture of her ideal mate, the man of her dreams. Naturally, when she met such a man she married him.

Even dreams that seem foolish may tell you vital truths about yourself. Do you toil up endless ladders in sleep? You have ambitions, but you harbor a secret, paralyzing fear they won't be realized.

To dream of taking a journey may indicate a desire to get out of an unpleasant situation. Dreaming of a judge or jury may mean you feel guilty about some action, fear social disapproval.

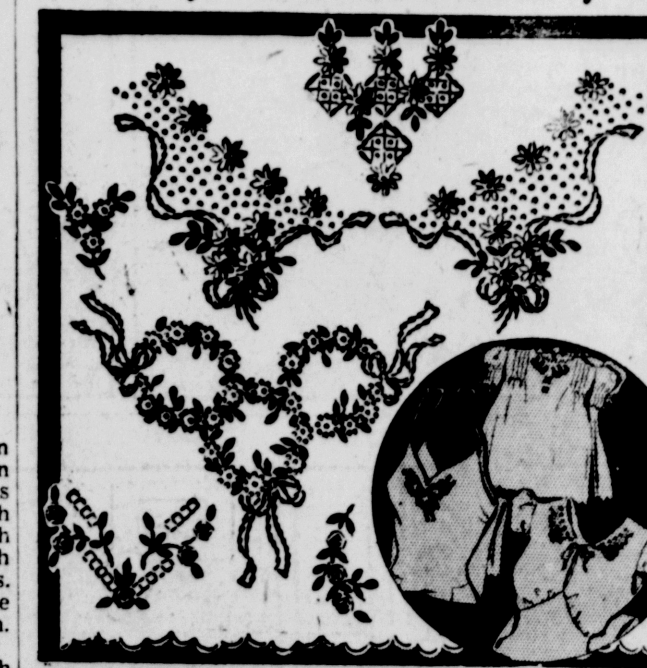

Many such significant dreams are explained in our 32-page booklet. Discusses dreams and the subconscious mind from the scientific standpoint. Tells how to read dream symbols, relate them to personal difficulties.

Tobe, Who Helps Dress You, Says War Is Hobbling Skirts

By AMY PORTER

AP Feature Writer
As headlines grow wider, women's skirts grow narrower. Believe it or not, it's cause and effect.

The slim silhouette is definitely on its way, and you can blame it on the war. As you hobble about in a hobble skirt this fall, remember that it never would have happened if it hadn't been for Hitler.

For an explanation of the strange tie-up between war and fashion you couldn't go to a better authority than the woman who is known as Tobe, fashion advisor to more than 100 big stores.

Tobe's favorite slogan is "Head-line news makes fashion news."

"Today's big black headlines won't make us go into mourning," she says, "but they will be translated into the straightest, simplest, slimmest clothes we've worn for years."

"Possibly frugal French designers feel that less material should be used, hence narrow skirts. Possibly they think full skirts are a kind of vanity, unsuitable in war time. In any case, it's sure that new fall daytime clothes will stick to the straight and narrow. Only in our jewels and in our evening things will we go gay and luxurious."

The lady has influence. You don't hear much about her because she works without fanfare, behind the fashion scenes. But her clients, the biggest stores in the country, pay her from $400 to $3,000 a year to advise them on what to buy. You don't pay money like that for advice to throw away.

Tobe (the rest of whose name is Mrs. Herbert Davis) gives sometimes personal conferences.

Here's how Tobe's influence works. She believes in the slim silhouette, so she may say to a manufacturer, "I'm convinced narrow-skirted sheer wool dresses will sell well this fall. Why don't you make some up now?"

The manufacturer very probably says OK. Then, in her fashion report, Tobe may say, "The slim silhouette appears in a new line of dark sheer wools made up by Stern & Stern at our suggestion. We advise you stock at least two

Tobe
"We're due for a reaction" styles: No. 77, quoted $9.75, and No. 89, quoted $10.75."

Very likely the store says OK, too, and there you are. The slim silhouette gets a big boost.

So if you feel like rebelling, you can see the cards are stacked against you. You'll wear narrow skirts, and like it.

Model's Methods

Soap And Water Calls For Lots Of Make-Up Expert

The trend in lipsticks, as Peggy Healey sees it, is darker for blondes, lighter for brunettes.

Peggy, who told us this as she smiled across a big desk at the models agency, has seen a lot of makeup in five years of dashing across Europe and America, modeling fashions and posing for photographers.

She's a blonde herself and thinks the darker makeup gives her an exotic flare, especially in the evening. And televised blondes find darker lipstick reproduces better.

Peggy is a living example of what three simple rules do for pretty faces. These are the rules: Cleanliness really is next to godliness. (Peggy favors cold showers and plenty of soap and water for her face. She doesn't depend on a lot of creams.)

Foundation makeup should be chosen carefully for each skin.

Practice in applying makeup is the surest way to get that essential natural look.

Peggy Healey demonstrated a neat trick for applying rouge. She sucked in her cheeks, deeply, then dotted rouge on the high point of her cheek bone and blended it down the cheek slightly into the hollow. That made her cheeks look less broad. It's a method that can be adapted by experiment to whatever shape face you have.

Eye makeup, Peggy says, is very important these days. It takes time to do. Black mascara is the thing. Omit eye shadow if you have large eyes. You can make small eyes lovelier by penciling a tiny line from the inner corner of the eye, across the lashes out and up a bit at the outer corner.

Peggy Healey is a glamour girl with a sweet disposition. So, she took off her hat for the photographs even though she didn't want to. She had a cold and was afraid it would show up. It didn't. Her makeup art is good enough to hide a cold.

She's Boston born and bred. Started modeling to prove her independence when she came to

She chose to live at a girls' hotel near her work because of good private concerts there and also because she doesn't like exercise, even walking, too well. She does like to read and to dance. And even with her days jammed with posing appointments she can find time to assemble 40 models for a charity ball.

Make-Up Model's Chart

This is the summary of Peggy Healey's reason for being a popular model in Europe and this country, too: Height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight 125 pounds; hair, blonde; eyes, blue; skin, fair; bust, 33 1/2 inches; waist, 24 1/2 inches; hips, 36 inches; dress size, 12 or 14; shoes, 8 AA; hose 10; hat, 22 1/2; gloves, 7 1/2.

How to Buy it YOUR MEAT How to Cook it

Rib Chops of Lamb Always In Favor

Broil Them With Fruit Or With Vegetable Accompaniment

Lamb chops for a luncheon party are always a good choice. They fit well into a wide variety of dainty menus for they possess a fine and delicate flavor and at the same time are substantial enough to satisfy keen appetites.

The possible combinations of lamb chops and vegetables or fruit are almost limitless, and many pretty as well as delicious effects can be achieved with little care and ingenuity.

DINNER MENU

Cream of Mushroom Soup
French Lamb Chops with Spiced Apples
Julienne Potatoes
Buttered String Beans
Lettuce and Sliced Beet Salad
Chocolate Eclairs
Coffee
Iced Tea

Lamb chops are tender and are most easily and successfully cooked by broiling or panbroiling. They should be cut from three-fourths to one inch thick. Lamb chops may be of several kinds, but among the most popular are those cut from the rib section, with each one containing a rib. For a special occasion, the meat may be removed from the ends of the ribs. Then a paper frill, white or colored, may be placed about the bone end when it is served. A more unusual but a very pretty way to decorate the rib ends of lamb chops is with a fruit, spiced apples, or with vegetables, for instance potato or carrot balls.

Cook by Broiling

Lamb chops need not be restricted to parties or special occasions, however. They are delicious for the family lunch or dinner, and are high in food value. They are among the quickly cooked meats, which makes them a good choice when you want to get an excellent meal in a short time.

Of course, these chops should not be broiled too quickly; that is, not at too high a temperature. Allow a distance of about 3 inches between the surface of the chops and the source of the heat, and have the regulator set at high. If the distance must be less, lower the heat accordingly. Then your chops will be nicely browned on one side by the time they are cooked half way through, and only one turning will be necessary.

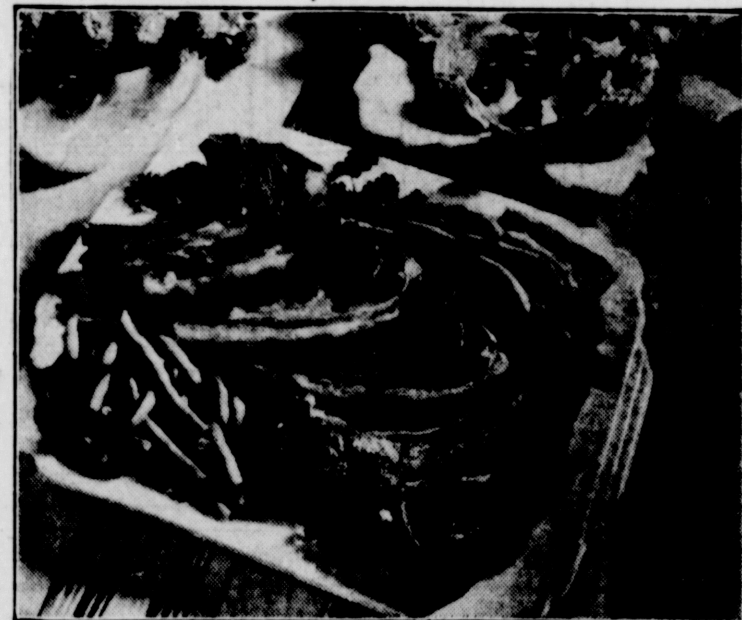

Stuffed lamb chops make a very substantial main dish for company luncheon or dinner or family meal. The use of stuffing is an economy idea, for it extends the fine flavor of the chops. The use of lamb chops with other foods in a combination grill is another pleasing idea to give variety to menu and service for a luncheon.

8 lamb chops
4 slices bacon
4 potatoes, cooked
2 tablespoons grated cheese
4 small tomatoes
1 cup kernel corn
4 large peach halves
Whole cloves
Salt and pepper

Broil lamb chops as usual. When they are ready to turn, place on the grill bacon slices, potatoes cut in half and sprinkled with cheese, tomatoes stuffed with whole kernel corn, and peach halves stuck with whole cloves. Broil until the meats are done and the vegetables heated through.

Stuffed Lamb Chops

Have rib chops cut 3/4-inch thick. Fry 6 tablespoons fine bread crumbs in butter in which 1 tablespoon finely minced onion has been browned. Season with salt, pepper and a little poultry seasoning. Cut the chops from the meat side, making a pocket large enough to insert a tablespoon of the stuffing. Broil in the usual manner.

This picture shows choice rib chops of lamb, which are cooked to perfection by broiling. This cut is identical by the round, tender muscle portion and the long rib bone which each chop contains. This cut of meat is a favorite for those special occasions where we desire a main dish of fine and delicate flavor and at the same time hearty enough to satisfy keen appetites.

HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

YESTERDAY, while out with Jan, Derek saw Lenore Page but escaped from her. That same night, Lance had a bad fall trying to walk. He tells Norma he hates her.

Chapter 24 Recognition

JAN led Norma to her room while Derek undressed Lance, examined him for injuries, found nothing but a few slight bruises, and settled him into the deep, soft bed.

Norma huddled down in a chair, staring at the flowered blue carpet with aching, hurting eyes. Her fingers twitched at her sensible gray tweed skirt, picking out little nubs of wool. "You heard him, Jan. He hates the sight of me. I'd better move my things out and get away from him. School will be over in three more weeks and I can go away somewhere."

"No," Jan was firm. "You stay here, Norma. I know Lance better than you know him. He'll be sorry, Norma. He's ill, mentally sick, he isn't quite responsible now. Give him time to get well and just avoid him for awhile. You love him, don't you?"

"Yes, but he doesn't want me. I irritate him lately, get on his nerves. I'd make myself over if I could, but I don't know how."

Jan thought, "I know how she feels. We're in the same boat, all right. I'd make myself over, too. I want Derek so terribly."

"Please stick it out, Norma, if you can," she begged. "He really needs you, even though he doesn't realize it now, and I need you. Will you stay with us?"

Norma nodded agreement, unhappily. "I'll try to get some sleep now."

Jan, returning to Lance, determined to speak frankly to Rose in the morning. Ask her to stay away from Lance, perhaps ask her to move.

Derek dimmed the lights and sank into a low, comfortable chair beside the bed. He had propped Lance up on pillows and lighted a cigarette for him. Jan shut the door and curled up on the end of the bed, waiting for she knew Lance would talk this thing out and if he didn't mind having Derek hear, she must not, either.

Her eyes, almost black with sorrow and sympathy and deep tenderness, dwelt on her brother's haggard, shadowed face. "You shouldn't have talked to Norma like that," she reproached very gently.

"I know," his voice, thin and feverish, ran on. "I'm a little mad, I suppose. I know, deep down, she's worth a dozen Roses. I'll get over this in time. I don't expect you to understand, Jan. Rose made me come alive. Made me want to be a man again." His voice died out; his brilliant, shifting eyes grew dull. He'd never talked to anyone, except a little to Frank, concerning his crack-up. For two years he had repressed memory until now it leaped like fire from the hidden places in his brain to his drained white lips. He had to talk. He had to tell someone.

The Crash

"THE ship was a beauty," he said. "A commercial passenger job, twin-motored, designed for conversion to a light bombing plane in case of war. Carried sixteen people. She had a ceiling of twenty thousand and a cruising range of two hundred and fifty miles an hour. She'd passed every ground test with flying colors, behaved perfectly in the wind tunnel. I asked to take her up. I wanted to feel her come to life with me at the stick. Test pilots fall in love with ships, did you know that? Well, I was in love with her before she left the ground. She was trim and proud and glamorous. Fickle, too, but I didn't know that. A test pilot chooses his work because his nature craves something new, the time something strange and untried and suspenseful. He knows the danger, but he doesn't think about it."

"It was a perfect day. Clear sky, sunny, good head wind. I put her through her paces and she reacted like a trained jumper. I saw photographers and newsreel cameras snapping her when I pulled her out of the power dive. She'd passed every test but one—dipping. I took her up twelve thousand feet—she was designed automatically to come out of a spin in a turn and a half, she had had a spin chute on her tail rudder, the rip cord was in the cockpit—when I started her spinning down I never felt so glorious in all my life. But she didn't come out of the spin. I saw she wasn't going to. I pulled the rip cord and nothing happened. I saw the ground rushing up at me. I tugged that cord hard enough to break it. I felt her nose lift, a scant hundred feet above the ground. I knew the chute had opened and checked the spin, but it was too late... too late!"

Fishermen Enjoy Brief Paradise

Ithaca, N. Y., June 7.—A fisherman's paradise was opened to 40 anglers recently in a 10-day experiment at Cornell University to learn the results of stocking legal-sized fish in streams.

Each day four fishermen were allowed to cast their lines in 2,000 feet of Cascadilla Creek near the University fish hatchery, and each day in this stream were 100 legal-sized brown trout.

Each angler was allowed to keep two fish, but he could catch as many as he liked provided he put them back. Each day replacements were made for the fish taken so that the next day's fishermen would have the same opportunity. By their success or failure, they were expected to help show the advisability and cost per mile of stocking central New York streams with legal trout, how

He lay back on the pillow, his eyes closed, his breathing uneven. His two listeners sat motionless, still in the grip of tragic drama, still seeing in terrified imagination the mangled ship and its mangled pilot.

Derek, shaken, observed the tears on Jan's face, saw the queer, peaceful stillness on Lance's. "I think I can sleep now," Lance whispered. "Maybe once... without dreaming."

Jan raised the windows and turned off the light and met Derek in the hallway. Neither of them said anything. At the door of her room he bent swiftly and kissed her cold cheek, turned and climbed the ladder to his tent on the rooftop.

'Escape Medium'

JUST before noon the next day, when she returned to her suit and hat to Rose, Jan said with mature firmness: "You would be doing Lance a favor, Rose, to stay away from him altogether. You've upset him dreadfully and—"

"Don't look so tragic," Rose broke in, smiling. "He needs an escape medium. A little laughter and gaiety surely can't harm him! Are you all in conspiracy to isolate him from the world? I'm sorry for him," she said, a careless kindness in her bright voice.

There was no smile on Jan's sober countenance. "Yesterday I might have agreed with you, Rose, at least partially, but not this morning. When we were all out of the house last night he lifted himself from his chair and tried to walk. He fell, faintly. Luckily he wasn't injured. We had a bad time with him. Rose, you can't be so stupid as not to see he's in love with you, or at least fancies he is. I've known it all along, but I kept thinking he had enough judgment to control himself. But he hadn't. You were too much for him." Jan's tone grew bitter and accusing. "You made him want a life he can't have with your kisses and caresses and thoughtless favors. You made him miserable and unhappy and I want you to leave him alone. If you don't, I'll have to ask you to move."

Contrition softened the other girl's hard eyes. "I'm sorry. I'll undo the harm if I can, but I don't agree with you that ignoring him will help. I've got to make him understand me, see how worthless I'd be to him, even if he were well. Even if I loved him, and I don't, I wouldn't persecute myself to be jealous." Her carefully-tended face set into harsh contours. "I had love once, Jan. It wasn't enough for a woman like me. It's money I want, security, luxury, the cream of life. I don't want skimmed milk, even if it's seasoned with love! Let me help Lance in my way. Jan, I'll let him know just how I feel and if he comes to despise me, well, all the better. Satisfied now?"

"I suppose, You should know better than I," Jan admitted, conscious that Rose's self-possession and sureness made her feel infinitely naive and gauche. She was glad to end the interview and escape to her room sanctuaries, glad to find Neptune sitting up, beside the chimney industriously washing his face.

Neptune, upon seeing her, desisted his washing and stared round-eyed and curious at her pink toes poking out the end of her gaudy beach sandals. Obliviously she wiggled her big toe and pretended to bite it. Stooping down she rolled him over and rubbed his furry stomach. "Neppy," she coaxed. "I'll treat you to the best can of salmon in Sea Tide if you'll pose for a portrait in oils."

He meowed agreement, or so she took it at least. Hoping for the best, she got out her easel and a new canvas and started work.

Derek, guiding his motored perambulator up and down the beach front, felt insecure, felt sure that Lenore, having seen him last night, would try to find him. He had an away from her, but she was definitely not the type who would give up without a struggle an opportunity to marry millions.

For the first day and the second and third he was careful and watchful, but there was no sign of her. By the end of the week he dismissed the incident on the pier as unfortunate, deciding she either had thought it no use to find him or had returned east.

However, he was wrong. She had been searching for him but, by a combination of coincidental circumstances, had missed him by minutes. Rose, a little past noon on Sunday, rode to the Surf Club in Santa Monica with him, trying to pierce his reticence with words which contained violent, if cleverly hidden, sting. Before the club entrance he stopped the tram to let her off, relieved to be rid of her, when a slim girl in a white satin bathing suit and matching beach robe came out of the grilled iron gate and saw him.

Despite uniform, cap and sun glasses, she knew that arrogant nose and flaming copper hair.

The Moss Feature Syndicate, Greensboro, N. C.

32 fish were caught in one day, and 24 on the other.

The average catch for the 10-day period was 15 fish a day. Each angler averaged about five hours of fishing a day and caught on the average three fish. This gives a measure of the return when the stock in the stream is maintained at 50 fish every 1,000 feet, says Dr. Mottley. At the rate indicated it took an average of 100 minutes to catch a fish, but actual time varied from forty minutes to five hours.

First honors went to the worm fishermen who accounted for 86 per cent of the fish caught. Only 15 per cent were taken by means of minnows, both alive and pickled. The wet-fly fishermen caught 12 per cent, and only two fish were caught by dry flies. The others, constituting seven per cent, were taken on a variety of lures.

Every Fish Examined

Only two fish were killed by injuries, and every fish kept by the anglers was examined. A study of the stomachs to see what newly planted brown trout eat showed that one of the main items was the bait provided by the sportsmen, chiefly the night crawler. Natural food consisted of land creatures washed in after a rain and small quantities of stream dwellers such as insect larvae, crayfish, and minnows.

Several anglers reported that the fish made excellent eating and were not inferior to wild trout. After a few days in the stream it was noted that the fish developed the bright spots and the lighter background colors typical of wild fish and that they soon learned to hide in favorable pools.

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME.

DELICATE QUESTION OF PRECEDENCE AT WEDDING CALLS FOR COMPROMISE

This is what Emily Post suggests where bride's mother is dead and young sister is only relative.

At a perfectly directed church wedding, the bride's mother is seated last, and when she takes her place in the front pew this is the signal for the wedding march to begin. If the bride has no mother, her nearest relative takes her place. But an unusual situation is described in a letter from the groom's mother: "The bride's mother is dead and the bride's only attendant is her twin sister. The person taking her mother's place is a younger sister! Don't you think that in this particular situation, where our ages are so far apart, I should be given precedence out of respect?"

Agree that in this case some compromise might be made with the usual procedure—not so much to transfer traditional emphasis upon the family of the bridegroom as to give support to the very young representative of the bride. My suggestion is to make no pause between the entrance of the heads of the two families. The groom's mother and the bride's sister would meet in the vestibule when the processional is ready. The groom's mother would be taken up the aisle by one usher and the bride's sister follow with a second usher, a short distance behind. In other words, the bride's sister would be last but it would be more or less a double entrance. On the other hand, should the sister walk ahead of the groom's mother and seat herself first, she would appear to be taking precedence over the groom's mother—not waving it!

Individual Baking Dishes
Dear Mrs. Post: I have just received a dozen individual pots with covers and handles. They can be used in the oven and I imagine on the table as well. Will you please tell me at what kind of meals these dishes are to be used and what is the food supposed to be served in them. They are not shallow but neither are they especially deep.

Answer: If they are deep, they are intended for soup. If they are shallow ones, then they are intended for other foods. If they are of medium depth, I should say they could be used for both. In any case, they are excellent in a house where the hostess does her own serving because they can be put at the places before people sit down and with the lids left on, the soup (or fish) will stay hot for a long time. They are also perfect for buffet parties, both for soups and substantial foods such as goulash or other varieties of meat stew, creamed fish or chicken, scalloped potatoes, baked beans, macaroni, etc.

Office Discipline
Dear Mrs. Post: The other day one of the girls in the office sneezed, and as has always been my habit, I said, "God Bless you." The office manager brought me to task about it and I am curious to know why.

Answer: I doubt very much if it was what you said, so much as whether you said it so loud you attracted the attention of those working near you—which is not good office discipline. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Table Settings." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

'Now, if I Had My Way---'

The question: "If you had unlimited time and financial resources and decided to take a vacation, what would you do?"

The answers:

Donald Mathews, Kingston plumber:
"My idea of a perfect vacation would be to go up to Canada and hunt moose. I hunt around here once in a while for rabbits and squirrels and this fall I think I'll try to get a deer. Do a little fishing, too, but the weather has spoiled it so far this year. Canada is the ideal place to hunt and fish—there are some small lakes up there that never have been fished in yet. A month or two up there and I'd be perfectly satisfied."

Milton Elmendorf, Hurley, garageman and notary public:

"I'd like to see America. There's too much to see right here in the United States, instead of going to Europe or some other place. The longest trip I ever took was to Cuba—went there several times about 15 years ago. I think the average person today realizes that other countries have nothing on America when it comes to looking for a place to spend a vacation. After visiting throughout the west, then I think I would like to see Alaska."

Clayton Quick, Kerhonkson, carpenter:

"If I could go anywhere I wanted, I'd head for Panama and settle there. I like adventure and I have friends down there. I understand the government grants land to Americans who want to make Panama their permanent home. I've done quite a bit of traveling—Florida, Texas and about every other state in the union. Never did any hitch-hiking, always had a car to travel in. I'd like to see Paris some time, too, but not right now, with that war going the way it is right now!"

John Hornbeck, Napanoch, student:

"I'd like to visit Hawaii—I've seen so many pictures and read so much about those islands. I think it would be my idea of a real vacation. I've done some hunting in this section—squirrels, rabbits and deer. Never bagged a deer, though. I suppose a perfect vacation for someone interested in hunting would be to go to Africa for big game. Anyway, I'd want to go some place where I would find lots of adventure if I could do anything I liked."

W. D. Roosa, Stone Ridge, farmer:

"I'd like to visit California. I think that would be a very nice place to enjoy a vacation. I was born in Lyonsville and have lived in Stone Ridge for about 37 years. Once I went to Washington, D. C., and I've been to Niagara Falls, too. Europe is the last place in the world that I'd like to visit. I think anyone could have a fine vacation by just going around New York State. There's just as much to see right in our own state as any place else."

Harold Harp, Napanoch, clerk:

"I'd like to visit Hollywood and the different movie studios and see how moving pictures are made—and, of course, get a look at some of those beautiful actresses! I'm a candid camera fan and I print and develop my own pictures. If I visited Hollywood, I would make a study of taking movies. I have a projector and buy films to show on it. Some day I'd like to have a movie camera and take my own moving pictures. If I got to Hollywood, I'd want to see Los Angeles, San Francisco and other cities in California."

Concerts Announced For Winter Season

The committee in charge of the community concerts announces that the high school auditorium, where all of the concerts will be held the coming season, is entirely sold out.

The committee feels that this is due in part to the excellence of the season's program and in part to the fact that the music is an inspiration and stabilizer in these troublous times, and the committee members and also the workers wish to express their appreciation of the special effort put forth by all who were interested, to bring such a remarkably fine group of concerts to the music lovers of this community the coming season. The cooperation of the press of both the city and county has also been gratefully appreciated as being inestimably valuable.

The artists chosen for the 1940-41 concerts are Helen Jepson, Metropolitan Opera soprano, whose glorious voice, superb musicianship and genuine and cordial humanity have won for her the adulation of her audiences; the world famous General Plattoff Don Cossack choir, featuring their spectacular dancing as well as their singing; Vronsky and Babine, duo pianists, and the Kraeuter Trio, whose concerts fascinate all who are so fortunate as to hear them.

AFTER the rain, sudden heat. Almost discouraging to the best of decorating plans. But not quite.

The other day when the thermometer stood at 86 reminding of shimmering days of heat ahead, Ann Moore was telling the visitor in her office:

"Of course you can make your home look cooler; in fact you can get a complete change from its winter appearance with scarcely any cash outlay. It's a simple matter to Muresco your lamp bases, and the dark interior of your fireplace, but you've no idea how it will freshen up a room. (Wash it of next winter.)

"And if you can't afford chintz for slip covers, many a clever woman has pleated plain white sheeting for the purpose, and the effect is not only cool, but smart."

That's the advantage of visiting Ann Moore, Herzog's own decorating consultant. What you may not think of yourself, she may be able to think of for you.

There are as many decorating problems as there are homes, but there is a solution to every one. And there are hundreds of individual things you can do, at very little cost, to make your home interesting. Herzog's decorating service free. Phone or visit Ann Moore for suggestions any time.

Did you know that Johnson's Wood Dye, used on unfinished furniture, woodwork and floors, marvelously brings out the natural beauty of the wood?

Have you ever tied painting duck-covered cushions? Just wet them, and while they are wet, give them thin coats of Ulaac.

It's time now to aint radiators and heat pipes to make them presentable. Use thin coats of Moore's wall paint. Light tints protect and decorate the surface without interfering with the giving-off of heat.

Can you put your hands on an empty barrel or all keg? If so, you're in luck, aint it with white Impervo or Ulaac, and the metal strips in Royal Blue or Bright Red Decorative Colors. Stencil a design on the top and cover with a piece of clear glass. (We have some beautiful stencil designs.) Then you've something to use for a porch lawn table, or as an end table alongside a settee.

When the bride begins to furnish her home, she often needs and wants many more things than she can afford to buy.

Every bride-elect who has seen our Crafty-Aid, wants one badly. That's a tip to those of you who are hunting wedding gifts.

Crafty-Aid is a four-in-one piece of household furniture of compact modern design. At only the touch of a finger it is converted from a kitchen occasional chair, to a nicely padded ironing table, or a step-ladder with safety treads, or a bedside table. It also serves as a baby's high chair. Light in weight, it may be carried easily from room to room.

It comes in white, ivory, or maple. Price, only $5.95.

Wallkill Inmate Would 'Cut' Term

Anthony Bocchetti, of Highland, confined to Wallkill prison on a larceny charge, sought Friday to have his term reduced when application was made to Justice Pierce H. Russell by Clyde Dart, of New York, counsel to Bocchetti. Sentenced to prison for grand larceny from Ulster county by Judge Frederick G. Traver, the defendant now claims that he was sentenced for grand larceny, first degree, but that he did not have advice of counsel when he pleaded to the charge.

He claims now that he pleaded guilty to larceny and after he had admitted his guilt, the degree of larceny was stepped up to first degree, carrying a long sentence. He claimed that only after he had admitted to the charge that counsel was assigned. His counsel told the court that Bocchetti had never had the benefit of advice of counsel until after he had admitted his guilt.

District Attorney N. LeVan Haver appeared for The People and told the court that the late Judge Traver had always been very careful to see that defendants were allowed their full rights. He agreed to submit records of the case to the court and decision was reserved.

Involved Action Heard by Russell

An action so involved that apparently counsel did not know what it was all about came up before Justice Russell in special term Friday. General Ransom H. Gillette, of Albany and Hudson appeared for the proprietor of a dress store in Hudson and N. Berne Silberg of Albany appeared in opposition.

One of the questions involved was for whom Mr. Silberg appeared. The matter dated back 10 years and there were charges by counsel that they did not know whom they were representing and also charges that there had been a mix-up in the case with some other matter. Justice Russell finally took what papers were in court and allowed additional time for the filing of other papers.

The question involved was whether payment had been made to a New York concern, M. J. Stewart & Company for certain dresses, coats and other apparel bought back in 1930. The amount involved was stated to be some $300 or $400. A judgment was taken by default in New York county back in 1931 and the matter dragged along for some time until finally the sheriff of Columbia county levied on the car of defendant.

The defendant claims there never was anything due and that apparently no credit was given back in 1930 for returned merchandise. General Gillette asked that the judgment be vacated and he claimed that he never had been served with a complaint.

"The defendant has paid the bill," said the general, as he asked that not only the judgment be vacated but also that the plaintiff pay a bond to indemnify the defendant for loss of use of her car during the time it is held by the sheriff.

General Gillette said apparently M. J. Stewart & Company, Fifth avenue firm, with whom the defendant did have dealings had in some way assigned or sold a claim, which did not exist. He said Stewart & Company went into bankruptcy and accounts were credited to Hollander & Company as successor but that Hollander & Company had failed.

This was denied by counsel in opposition, who said that Stewart & Company is still in business in New York and never went into bankruptcy. He also denied that L. J. Hollander ever took over the Stewart & Company. Mr. Silberg said General Gillette challenged the authority of Mr. Silberg to appear in the matter, stating that he never had been properly substituted.

The general said Mr. Silberg had no standing in court, while Mr. Silberg argued he appeared for counsel, who had served a complaint in the case.

General Gillette said he never had been given a copy of the complaint although he demanded it. Not receiving the complaint, he said, there was no case in court and he asked for a vacating of the judgment.

General Gillette said Mr. Silberg could not be in court since a difference, which had existed back several years ago, had been settled when he and opposing counsel "went out in the shed and settled the matter."

Col. Muir Sends Letter of Thanks

Colonel James I. Muir of the 26th Infantry, has written the following letter to Mayor C. J. Heislman regarding the reception tendered the regiment when it camped here for the night earlier in the week:

"We arrived at our home station, Plattsburg Barracks, after our stay with you. I want to take advantage of this first opportunity to thank you for your hospitality while we were there. "As I told you, and as I have written Captain Behrens, as soon as I saw the grass had been cut, I knew we were in a friendly community."

"I'm sorry our exhibit was rained out, as I believe your citizens would have profited therefrom, but that was one of the things that must be accepted. "Again, please accept the thanks of the officers and men of the 26th Infantry and of myself for the friendly and efficient way in which you took care of the regiment."

"May I ask you to express to everyone concerned our appreciation of their efforts, so that none will be omitted?"

Prize Winning Portrait.

Norbert Heermann Painting Pennington Studio

Woodstock, June 8 (By Marguerite Hurter) — The portrait that won the popularity prize of the Apple Blossom Show at the Woodstock gallery this year proves to be a study of Barbara Elizabeth Haver, daughter of District Attorney and Mrs. N. LeVan Haver, painted by Norbert Heermann.

Barbara is a beautiful child, and the delicate touches of Mr. Heermann has finessed to keep the simplicity and natural grace of the nine-year-old girl mark the master hand of an artist who has been painting children of famous families with great success.

The reproduction of the portrait was made in Kingston at the Pennington studio, where we were fortunate enough to discover upon the wall a group picture taken in 1921 in which the mother of the little girl is featured as "May Queen" of the Kingston High School. Mrs. Haver's maiden name was Jacquelyn Monroe, and there is no question that little Miss Barbara Haver will one day be as beautiful as her mother and be a future May Queen. True it is, she won all glances in the Woodstock Apple Blossom Exhibition.

We telephoned Barbara to find out what school she attended. She says it is School Number Seven, and that she is in the fourth grade. She takes piano lessons, and we hope one day to meet her at the country club or Art Gallery in Woodstock.

Justice Allows

Palmer's Counsel

Additional Week

Raymond Palmer of East Durham who in 1935 was ordered to pay $60 a month alimony to his wife has been meeting with difficulties recently, according to his attorney, Thornton Friedman of Catskill.

Before Justice Russell in special term Friday A. G. Klages of New York city appeared for Mrs. Palmer, who lives with her aged father in Teaneck, N. J., and asked that Mr. Palmer be held in contempt of court because he is $420 behind in the alimony payments. He told the court all payments had stopped last November.

In turn Mr. Friedman made a cross motion asking for reduction of the alimony on the grounds that Mr. Palmer is no longer able to make payments. He said not only had Mr. Palmer lost a great deal of his business but he had some time ago had the misfortune to have a can of milk fall on his foot fracturing it so he was compelled to hire a man to do his work.

Palmer has trucks which haul milk from farms to Albany markets. This business has fallen off recently because of the sale of milk to other sources, counsel said, as he gave that as the reason for diminished payments of alimony.

Mr. Palmer's attorney said that when the alimony was fixed at $60 a month he was earning $150 a month, while now he earns but $50. Mrs. Palmer's attorney said she was in dire need of money. She weighs 230 pounds, is 42 years old, has but one eye and is unable to earn anything. She has no income.

Her attorney told the court that Mr. Palmer lives at East Durham with another woman and maintains a home there while his wife is in New Jersey without funds to support herself.

At the time the divorce action was taken no defense was offered and Mrs. Palmer was granted the $60 a month alimony.

"I am always suspicious of these small earnings when a man is supporting two women," said Justice Russell when the application was made for reduction of alimony on the grounds Palmer earns but $50 a month now.

Palmer's counsel said that not only had Palmer not been able to pay the alimony but since his injury he had been compelled to borrow money to pay his hired man. He had borrowed $300 for that purpose. He also held that Mr. Palmer had been given $210, the proceeds of an insurance policy, but her attorney argued that this was due her since she had paid the premiums for years on it.

After lengthy argument counsel for Mr. Palmer asked that he be relieved from paying the alimony now in arrears and that he be permitted to pay $20 a month during the time of his reduced earnings. Justice Russell allowed a week in which to file affidavits regarding the earnings of the defendant but he intimated that he thought a monthly payment of about $25 would be right and also that the defendant pay his wife about $2 a month on the back alimony until it was paid up.

Ships at Tampico

Mexico City, June 8 (AP)—The Italian tanker Fedra, en route from Beaumont, Texas, to Naples with 57,000 barrels of oil, put in at Tampico today in response, her captain said, to radio instructions to make quickly for a neutral port.

Tompkins Must Pay More Money

Roland W. Tompkins, whose marriage to Bernice L. Tompkins was annulled on the grounds that he was a minor at the time of the marriage, will be compelled to make an additional $150 payment a week for the support of his infant child under an order of Justice Pierce H. Russell. Tompkins, 17 when the annulment was granted, will be compelled to pay $450 a week, raising the $3 allowance granted by Justice Foster at the time of the annulment. Benjamin Longstein appeared for Tompkins and Ted Goldman for Bernice L. Tompkins who asked that the $3 allowance be raised since the child now a couple of years old requires additional care and clothing. At the time of the granting of the $3 a week Tompkins was unemployed. Now he is employed by Marvin Mill Work, Inc., in Ellenville and earns $16.50 a week, according to counsel. Not only that but he has a car.

Opposition to any increase in payment was made on the grounds that when the $3 order was granted Tompkins was not employed and had to borrow the money to make the payments and that he is now paying back that money.

Justice Russell asked what kind of car the young man had and was informed it was a 1929 Ford which was in a questionable state of operation. Justice Russell, however, when informed that the girl was a cripple and unable to work, said he would increase the allowance. It was suggested that the payment be made $5 a week by counsel for Bernice Tompkins and counsel for Tompkins argued for $4.

"I will split the difference and make it $4.50. That extra 50c will be quite a lot of milk for a child," said Justice Russell. He fixed the amount at $4.50 so long as Tompkins was employed at his present salary. "If he gets out of work he can pay the $3 and if he gets an increase in pay, you can come in and move for an increase in allowance," said Justice Russell.

guns destroyed 25 tanks yesterday.

Heavy forces of Allied planes supported the artillery and infantry by breaking up troop concentrations, reducing infiltrations, and halting supply trains.

At the same time Nazi planes conducted scouting and bombing expeditions against Allied communications. A number of bombs were dropped on railway lines leading west, north and south from the Paris region, the spokesmen said.

He said several ports also were bombed, but did not identify them by name.

Raised Age Limits

London, June 8 (AP)—Great Britain today raised the age limits of many reserved, or exempt, occupations, making 30,000 white-collar workers immediately available for service and calling up many others by August 1. The reservations were extended to agricultural workers and "distributive workers," chiefly proprietors or managers of businesses.

Commodities Still Showing Firmness

Trading on the Stock Exchange Friday continued the low volume which has marked it for the past two weeks, during which time there has been but one day when trading exceeded a million shares. Total Friday was 470,000 shares vs. 430,000 Thursday. There still was an apparent relation between the course of prices for securities and the progress of the war in France and the news yesterday indicating that the Allied line was holding in the face of heavy German attacks was reflected in improved averages as various issues gained fractions to more than a point.

Industrials in the Dow-Jones list closed at 115.67, the best level of the day and a net gain of 1.19 points. Rails made their best gain in some time, advancing 82 points to 23.91. Utilities went ahead 25 to 18.50.

Commodities continued to show firmness and for the second day the Dow-Jones index scored a rise, being up 0.57 point from Thursday. Wheat showed persistent gains during the day and futures at Chicago closed up 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents a bushel. Maximum gains of 12 to 20 points in cotton futures were pared in late selling and final above previous level. There was more activity in the provisions trade, particularly lard. A rise of eight to 12 points in black pepper futures was helped by announcement of a 20 per cent increase in ocean freight rates from the Far East, effective August 1. Wool top features continued to strengthen. In Philadelphia soap manufacturers bought 500,000 pounds of extra tallow at four cents a pound delivered, while the New York market settled with holding extra tallow at 4 1/2 cents. Rubber futures were higher.

Bonds were steady and quiet with good inquiry reported for investment grade and utility obligations. Canadian issues showed gains and Canada 3s of 1936 were up more than two points. Argentine 4 1/2s lost about two points. Italian governments were firm.

London market showed firmer tone and both industrial and rail averages showed gains for the first time in two weeks. Paris Bourse continued firm with domestic shares leading the upturn.

Australia's first substantial war loan, 20,000,000 pounds, was heavily supported by the public and closed today fully subscribed.

Department stores sales throughout the country for the week ended June 1 were nine per cent under the same week last year, and decline attributed to unfavorable weather and the fact that Memorial Day fell on Thursday, normally the big day of the week. Sharpest declines were in the metropolitan areas and New York reported losses of 17 per cent from last year.

Willis-Overland Motors will engage in the munitions business through a new unit, the Empire Ordnance Co., which has been formed.

President Pope of First Boston Corp. said yesterday with a few changes in current laws private capital could provide the necessary funds for purchase and financing of manufacturing plants in connection with the national defense program. He warned against the use of vast public sums for such purpose.

A spokesman for the Anglo-French Purchasing Board said that the Allies are negotiating for considerable automotive equipment, including trucks. He added that so far orders for more than 8,000 airplanes had been placed in this country, of which more than 2,000 have been delivered. It was disclosed at the same time that an order had been placed for 4,000,000 worth of high-speed marine engines. It is generally understood that Packard Motor Corp. received this order.

Ward's reports estimates output of cars and trucks this week at 95,560 cars and trucks as against 65,265 in the same week last year. Last week, with operations curtailed by the holiday, the output was 60,980. Steady operations are looked for in the period immediately ahead.

Three Golfers Tie In National Open Now in Progress

Cleveland, June 8 (AP).—They "mobbed" the playoff window today in the drama of pressure, failure and victory that is golf's biggest gamble—the national open championship.

Promising what may be the greatest finish in the history of a tournament well marked by heart-break and disappointment to favorites and the sudden rush of longshots to fame, 21 of the game's stars were within a six stroke leadership bracket as the final 36-hole stretch drive started at Canterbury course.

Deadlocked for the 36-hole lead at 141 strokes were two top power players. "Slamming Sam" Sneed and Lawson Little, and one of golf's style artists, suave of golf's style, one-time "Joplin Ghost" and boy wonder of the sport, J. B. Connelley, were tied.

Their battle toward the game's biggest crown—with all the prospect of others ready to take advantage of any slip—carried the prospect of as colorful a free-for-all as the event ever has known.

Sneed, who lost his grasp on the title a year ago with a disastrous eight, turned in a two over par card of 39-36-74 yesterday to add to his Thursday round of 67, five under regulation figures.

Bad Winds
Canterbury's tricky winds, dominant two days, roared over the fairways during a rain squall which sent Sam reeling at the sixth hole. He took one over par there, coming home, he picked up three strokes on six holes, then ran into trouble at the short 17th going two over par.

The broad-shouldered Little, working on an opening 72, came in with a three under par card of 36-33-69, playing the kind of golf which won him the British and American amateur titles in 1934 and 1935.

Smith, tall Chicago professional, had nine of 36-36 to tie for par as against his first round 69. On the 18th, Smith missed by an inch a nine-foot putt which would have given him the lead and a slight edge toward capturing a title neither he, Sneed or Little ever has won.

Walsh Hits 69
Frank Walsh, veteran Rumson, N. J., professional, was just a stroke off the pace at 142, going around yesterday in 69. Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, and Ben Hogan, Dublin, Tex., were bracketed at 143. Parks, 1935 winner, had a second round 74, Hogan a 73. Ralph Guldahl, two time open champion, was at 144 and in position to turn loose the finishes which saw him win in 1937 and 1938.

Jim Demaret of Houston, Texas, big gun of the winter tour, hallooned to a 41 going out after a first-round 74 and then withdrew without turning in his card. Jim Ferrier, Australian champion, was low scoring amateur, getting a 74 yesterday for a 147 aggregate. Sixty-six scorers of 153 and ties, qualified for the final round.

Harris' Success Is No Surprise To Me —Says Harris

By STEVE O'LEARY
AP Feature Service

Boston — Cocksure and capable Mickey Harris — who didn't cost a thin dime—is a real penny from Heaven for Tom Yawkey after the bundles of cash that young man has spent for pitching talent which couldn't deliver.

Left-handed Mickey made his major league debut with Yawkey's Boston Red Sox this year and he might as well be back in Scranton as far as his surroundings affect him. Jittery? Not Maurice C. Harris, of Queens.

"Naw," he says scornfully. "Why should I be jittery? All you can do is throw them in there the best you know how just like in Scranton. I beat them or they beat me. More likely I beat them!"

Mickey started off for the Sox by winning two, losing one. He has a ready answer for his showing.

"I've got plenty of stuff and I send it in there all the time. It's the sincere statement of a rookie with sublime belief in his own destiny, and not the popping off of a braggart."

"And don't forget," he adds. "I've got a real ball club out there behind me."

Mickey attracted some attention a few years ago when he tried to talk Bill Terry into giving him a chance with the Giants.

Terry, it seems, was in a church-like mood and made the youthful pitching aspirant be off.

Mickey hid himself away but not until he had singed Terry's ears with a scathing blast.

Terry's loss was Yawkey's gain. Jack Egan, old American League umpire saw Mickey work and tipped off Billy Evans, Red Sox scout. Mickey was sent to Cleveland for a year, then moved up to Scranton, where he won 17 and lost 4.

He went south with the Red Sox this spring and won his spurs, announcing that the club needed two left handers — "me and Grove."

MICKEY HARRIS: 'I've Got Plenty Of Stuff'

He's doing his share to prove he's right. His most ardent rooter? Tom Yawkey. And why not?

Regatta Crews Are All Set For Last Week of Practice

The biggest week of pre-race action in recent Poughkeepsie regatta history is scheduled for the coming week on the Hudson as 20 crews, varsity, junior varsity and freshman, from eight colleges come up to racing pitch for the annual classic on June 18.

Upstream, in their sequestered Krum Elbow camp, Columbia's Lions are already veterans of camp life, with three trips over the four-mile racing strip behind them, including one trial under Coach Hubert Glendon's watch.

Princeton, California, Wisconsin and Syracuse, arriving on Friday, are well settled and ready to drive into a strenuous six-day campaign tomorrow morning.

Syracuse arrived with three crews, Princeton with varsity and freshman eight, California with varsity and junior varsity, and Wisconsin with only a varsity outfit.

Gather Early
Two of the favorites, unbeaten Cornell and unbeaten Washington, are expected to be week-end arrivals, along with Navy. It's the earliest gathering of the clans along the river that Poughkeepsie has seen in years. The early arriving schedule is due to the fact that the June 18 battle, by common consent, is expected to be the fastest and the closest struggle of years over these historic waters.

This town, which finds its place in the sports page sun for two weeks every year, is already reacting to the excitement of the event. A huge sign suspended across the main street of the city notifies motorists entering and leaving of the big event and invites them to be here on the important day. Little groups of carmen saunter along the main streets at mid-day and in early evening. Merchants who deal in foodstuffs are already doing a rushing business because the young men who row these boats stow away prodigious amounts of steak, milk, bread and other substantial items of diet three times daily.

Serving to key things up generally is the general opinion that the eastern flotilla, headed by Cornell and Columbia, has one of its best chances in years to go to the head of the river. That the westerners, Washington and California, will be as tough as they have always been is certain. Washington, of course, has earned the right to be called the west's leader as a result of its two-length victory over California at Seattle in April. But the California eight which Coach Carroll (Ky) Ebright brought in here Friday afternoon believes that that early-season decision can be reversed.

Lions Look Good
Columbia, which has not won this event since the great season of 1929 when Alastair McBain stroked the Lions through stormy waters to a spectacular victory, has continued to look well in practice here this week. Johnny (Joe) Fremd, who stroked the Lion varsity throughout its successful early season campaign, when only Yale nosed out Columbia, has apparently clinched his stroke seat for the four-mile race against the challenge of Sophomore Ed Gibson, the junior varsity sophomore, into the first boat at No. 3, and Hugh Bower, veteran of the four-mile race a year ago, to No. 7. Another possible change, on the port side, may bring Arthur Smith, another sophomore, into the No. 2 seat in place of Captain Henry Remmer. This change was made experimentally during the week and may or may not be permanent.

But it is the arrival of Coach Harrison Sanford's Big Red eight of Cornell that is awaited with most eagerness by the army of railbirds who will be clicking stop watches and perching wisely over the river during the work-outs of the coming week. Cornell, victor over both Yale and Harvard in May, is powerful, smooth and fast apparently a crew ideally fitted for the four-mile route.

Incidentally, four of the varsity eights that will paddle to the line at 5 p. m. on June 18 will bear the imprint of Washington coaching. Al Ulbricksen, of Washington, of course, learned his rowing there under Rusty Callow and finished his career in a brilliant finish against the field in 1926. Ky Ebright of California is a former Washington coxswain. Fred Spahn of Princeton wielded a sweep in Washington crews under Rusty Callow and was called by Callow "the greatest No. 7 I have ever seen." Sanford of Cornell was a crewmate of Ulbricksen under Callow.

Of the other head coaches on the river, Columbia's Hubert Glendon learned his rowing from his father, Richard A. (Old Man) Glendon. Ned Ten Eyck, representative of another great rowing family, found his tutor in his father, the late Jim Ten Eyck. Charles (Buck) Walsh of Navy rowed under (Old Man) Glendon at the Naval Academy and Ralph Hunn of Wisconsin, was trained by George (Mike) Murphy, who was one of Ed Leander's great stroke oars at Washington.

Public sale of tickets for the observation train is in progress both in New York and Poughkeepsie. In New York, the tickets may be obtained at the offices of the Division of Intercollegiate Athletics, 401 John Jay Hall, Columbia University. In Poughkeepsie, the tickets are on sale at offices at 271 Main street, 396 Main street and 416 Main street.

Godoy III Before His First Title Bout With Louis

What are Arturo Godoy's changes in his second heavyweight title try against Champion Joe Louis, which will take place at the Yankee Stadium on June 20?

Well, here's one phase that demands serious consideration. It is a sort of now-it-can-be-told yarn and, as told by Trainer Whitey Binstein, it incites one to wonder how the Chilean managed to produce such a great fight last February against Louis.

Cleveland's setback preserved the Boston Red Sox' half game lead in the American League although Hal Newhouse baffled the Bostonians with seven-hit pitching that enabled the Detroit Tigers to win 7-1.

The Washington Senators edged out the Chicago White Sox 3-2 and squeezed past the same club into fifth place in the standings. It was the seventh triumph for Dutch Leonard.

Rookie Al Brancato took care of the Philadelphia Athletics, beating the St. Louis Browns 3-2 by driving in all the A's runs on a triple, a double and a single. Nelson Pitter kept six hits scattered.

Cleveland's setback preserved the Boston Red Sox' half game lead in the American League although Hal Newhouse baffled the Bostonians with seven-hit pitching that enabled the Detroit Tigers to win 7-1.

The obvious question now is: What will Godoy do this time when he is in prime condition? The South American is rapidly attaining that happy state here at present. He is already certain that he'll enter the ring in the finest condition of his career.

When asked by Announcer Charles Zaines over WGNY of Newburgh recently what he thought of his chances against Louis this time Godoy replied, significantly, "Oh, boy!"

Father William F. McCarthy of the Lake Carmel Catholic Church, where Godoy attends, is a daily visitor to camp. The Chilean was besieged by autograph seekers after last Sunday's Mass.

In Max Minich of Cleveland and Henry Moroz and James J. Johnson of Brooklyn, Godoy has been enjoying the services of three exceptionally capable sparmates.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)
Ray Blades is out and the Brooklyn Dodgers are in.

The responsibility for the major leagues' first managerial crackup of 1940 should be spread in a lot of directions, but the Dodgers will have to shoulder their share of the blame, because they are doing everything the St. Louis Cardinals were supposed to do this season.

It was more than a coincidence that yesterday as the Cards fired Blades and hired Billy Southworth, the indomitable Dodgers drove back into first place in the National League with a 4-2 11-inning conquest of the Cincinnati Reds.

This was the sixth straight in a new winning streak for Brooklyn and the two immediately preceding triumphs had come at the expense of the Cardinals. One of them, 10-1 Tuesday night, probably caused Sam Breadon to decide to swap managers in St. Louis, because he left the next day for New York to meet Southworth, pilot of the Cards' Rochester farm in the International League.

The Cards were the "glamour team" of last season, soaring from sixth to second place under Blades' guidance, and were labelled as the team that could rout the Reds this year. Instead, the Dodgers have become baseball's bright boys.

Dolph's Homer Wins
They gave a stirring show at Cincinnati yesterday, winning on a two-run homer by Dolph Camilli in the eleventh and stopping Bucky Walters' undefeated streak at nine games.

Hugh Casey, the hurler the Reds whipped May 1 to end the Dodgers' sensational string of nine victories dating from the start of the season, pitched five scoreless innings in relief and got credit for the victory and a taste of sweet revenge.

The Cardinals, under the temporary handling of Coach Mike Gonzales, squeezed past the New York Giants 3-2, with the help of five double plays and advanced into fifth place. Southworth will take charge of the club Monday. He ought to know the magnitude of the task ahead because he replaced another "miracle manager" of the Cards, Bill McKechnie, in 1929, the year after McKechnie won the pennant. Southworth lasted till July again when the Cards brought back McKechnie, who had been at Rochester.

Pirates Victors 10-4
Another swap in positions in yesterday's general upheaval in the National League saw the Pittsburgh Pirates finally get out of the cellar and the Boston Bees drop in. The Pirates pounded out 18 hits to crush the phillies 10-4. The Chicago Cubs beat the Bees 5-3 with Bill Nicholson hitting his third homer in two days and Claude Passeau pitching eight-hit ball.

The New York Yankees handed Cleveland and Bob Feller a 5-4 beating, bunching four singles for two runs in the ninth. The Tribe was held to five hits, one of them Hal Trosky's 14th home run.

Cleveland's setback preserved the Boston Red Sox' half game lead in the American League although Hal Newhouse baffled the Bostonians with seven-hit pitching that enabled the Detroit Tigers to win 7-1.

The Washington Senators edged out the Chicago White Sox 3-2 and squeezed past the same club into fifth place in the standings. It was the seventh triumph for Dutch Leonard.

Rookie Al Brancato took care of the Philadelphia Athletics, beating the St. Louis Browns 3-2 by driving in all the A's runs on a triple, a double and a single. Nelson Pitter kept six hits scattered.

The obvious question now is: What will Godoy do this time when he is in prime condition? The South American is rapidly attaining that happy state here at present. He is already certain that he'll enter the ring in the finest condition of his career.

When asked by Announcer Charles Zaines over WGNY of Newburgh recently what he thought of his chances against Louis this time Godoy replied, significantly, "Oh, boy!"

Father William F. McCarthy of the Lake Carmel Catholic Church, where Godoy attends, is a daily visitor to camp. The Chilean was besieged by autograph seekers after last Sunday's Mass.

In Max Minich of Cleveland and Henry Moroz and James J. Johnson of Brooklyn, Godoy has been enjoying the services of three exceptionally capable sparmates.

Awards Approved By Supreme Court

Awards made by Delaware Commission, Section 8, for properties taken by the City of New York for water works purposes were approved by Supreme Court Justice Russell at special term here Friday. The report of the Commissioners was made April 26, 1940, and the City of New York by Vincent G. Connelly moved for confirmation of the awards. There were twenty awards made varying from $17,905 to lesser amounts making a total of $119,909 in all.

Mr. Connelly moved for confirmation of the report of Commissioners Edward Easton, Rolf T. Michelsen and Howard Beecher.

Objection was made by Clarence Hoornbeek to the award made to Bruce Gillette for parcel 1343, a tract of 66.718 acres with buildings. The claimant had testified to a valuation of over $21,000 at the hearing while the city placed a value of $5,500 on the premises. Objection was made to the allowance of $715 for witness fees as far too low.

The remaining nineteen awards were not opposed and the court directed an order of confirmation of the awards made by the commissioners of appraisal.

Children's Day Program

Children's Day will be celebrated Sunday at 3 p. m. at the Alliance Gospel Church, corner of Pine and Franklin streets. A very interesting and appropriate program has been arranged. The Sunday school will present a sketch entitled "A Child's Quest for Christ," endeavoring to answer the question "Is it possible for a child to know Christ in a real and personal way?" There will also be numerous recitations by the children as well as several songs appropriate to the occasion.

The first U. S. census in 1790 showed a population of nearly 4,000,000—considerably less than the present population of New York city.

Italy Will Be At War in Week

enter the war on the side of Germany.

An official announcement said that air mail service between Rome and Rio De Janeiro, which has been on a weekly basis, has been reduced to one round trip monthly.

Air Service Suspended

Air line service to Haifa, Bagdad and Bassora also was suspended, and officials said that planes will fly only as far as Rhodes until further notice.

The Roma-Sardinia steamship line also suspended service.

Amid emotional farewells from their families, a train load of soldiers, recalled to duty, left Rome for Naples this morning.

The troops departed for the south less than 24 hours after the appointment of 74-year-old Marshal Emilio Debono to command the "south army group." Military circles interpreted the designation as meaning his command would include the one Italian army which has been stationed in the south and the two which are in Libya.

Debono's appointment recalled the stirring days at the beginning of the Ethiopian campaign, when the bearded little Fascist "avenger" the Italians massacred at Adowa in 1896 by taking that Ethiopian town. Some Fascists have said one of Italy's first moves if she enters the present war would be to strike at Egypt and the Suez Canal from Libya.

'Too Late'

While Fascist authorities ignored the olive branch tendered by French Premier Paul Reynaud in his speech Wednesday night and said it had come "too late," there were other indications that Premier Mussolini will not delay for long his announcement of Italian entry into the European conflict.

(Authorized sources in Berlin said Italy's leading foreign affairs commentary, Realazioni Internazionali, would clarify Italy's position in an article appearing today.

(A broadcast on the German radio wavelength picked up today by CBS gave the six points of the commentary's article, which said "a democratic Europe which has hated and despised the Italian people can only be fought against. The Italian people will wage the war against the pluto-democracies of London and Paris to the finish and the utmost. . . . it is the Rome-Berlin axis which will enforce their peace with the victorious blades of their weapons.")

In the midst of reports from abroad that Italian merchant ships in foreign waters had been ordered to neutral ports and that scheduled sailings had been cancelled, a well-informed source said the Italian liner Rex would not sail for New York June 12, although the line still was taking reservations.

New Arms Grants

New armament grants went to the air force, which was given $380,000,000 for expansion in the next three years, and to the navy, which got $80,000,000 for sea and shore armament.

After a day of demonstrations demanding "liberation" of Britain's Mediterranean island naval base of Malta, the Institute of Roman Studies today issued invitations to hear a Rome university professor lecture Monday on "The Italianity of Corsica as revealed by its folk songs."

(The island of Corsica has figured prominently in Italian demands on French Mediterranean possessions.)

At the same time improvement in Italian-Russian diplomatic relations was reported, with Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso and Soviet Ambassador Nicolai Gorelchin to resume the posts they left when Russia recalled Gorelchin because of Italian demonstrations against the Soviet invasion of Finland.

Scouts Hold 4th Yearly Camp-o-Rec

The fourth annual Camp-o-ree of the Boy Scouts of the Ulster-Greene Council, which opened at the State Armory grounds on Manor avenue Friday night, is reported to be the largest in point of attendance of any yet held. At an early hour Friday evening a count showed 650 scouts and officers present and with four more troops scheduled to arrive later it was estimated that the number attending would be around 700.

Big district campfires featured last night's program and tonight a big campfire is scheduled.

A field rally, with contests and demonstrations, was set for two o'clock this afternoon, to end with a parade.

Sunday morning a Protestant religious service will be held on the grounds, while Catholic Scouts will march to St. Joseph's Church for the regular eight o'clock Mass.

Corporation Counsel John M. Cashin will make the address at the meeting to be held at the armory grounds and will make his remarks appropriate to the opening of Flag Week, with some thought as to the condition of the country today and the situation confronting the nation. Mayor Heiselman, who had been invited to be present, has left for Rochester and the Conference of Mayors and will not return to Kingston until next Thursday.

uled sailings had been cancelled, a well-informed source said the Italian liner Rex would not sail for New York June 12, although the line still was taking reservations.

tude. The ministry of home security reported one house badly damaged and other buildings slightly damaged there. Residents escaped injury by huddling for 45 minutes in shelters.

In Norfolk, where the alarm lasted an hour as compared with five minutes in Durham, deep-throated explosions were heard in the distance.

Lightning Hits Plane

Aerial danger of another sort momentarily imperiled Sir Stafford Cripps, new British ambassador en route to Russia, Reuters (British) news agency reported from Bucharest, when lightning struck the airplane in which he was flying near Salonica. He was unhurt and the plane reached Bucharest safe, Reuters said.

The Yorkshire Post, influential northern newspaper which often has been called the mouthpiece of War Minister Anthony Eden, declared that responsible American opinion soon might come to believe that the United States should declare war on Germany.

The newspaper predicted this opinion would want to "give the utmost moral weight to America's condemnation of the foul ideas of conquest that Hitler is rushing into effect," and expressed hope that "America will decide to send us war supplies at extreme war speed."

The press generally played up the speeding of United States plans to send armaments to the allies.

The Daily Telegraph, in its leading editorial, said: "The master word is 'what thou doest, do quickly.' Anything that hastens victory is of immeasurable value to the whole world."

As the government heightened air raid precautions, Home Secretary Sir John Anderson broadcast an appeal for volunteers to man defenses and said compulsory powers could be invoked if necessary.

The elder Ford, in asserting that he could build 1,000 planes every 24 hours, stipulated these conditions:

That his company be left to its own supervision; that there be no "meddling by government agencies," and that he have the counsel of such aviation authorities as Charles A. Lindbergh and Edward Rickenbacker.

During the World War Ford turned his great industrial plants to the mass production of munitions, Whippet tanks, ambulances and submarine chasers. Between 1925 and 1929 he manufactured a number of tri-motor transport planes, and was then credited with having plans in mind for the mass production of "flivver" aircraft.

Although the war department did not describe the pursuit plane being sent to Detroit, informed officials intimated that it was a high-speed, single-motor fighter which already has proved itself.

Military Training

The question of compulsory military training was injected into the complicated defense picture yesterday at the President's press conference, when Mr. Roosevelt was asked to comment on a New York Times editorial.

He replied that he had read only the first paragraph and liked it very much. The paragraph called for immediate adoption of a national system of compulsory military training.

Chairman Pittman (D., Nev.) of the Senate foreign affairs committee, commenting on the editorial, declared: "We should not incite hysteria by advocating at this time compulsory military service."

Exclaimed Senator Norris (Ind., Neb.): "I'm not for it, I never have been, and I don't believe we ought to have it."

Senator Thomas (D., Utah) voiced approval, and Senator Connally (D., Tex.) said some such policy eventually might be necessary if threatening world conditions continued.

Experiments indicate that as much as 50 per cent of the minerals and a large portion of the vitamins in vegetables may be lost in the cooking water.

Issue in Milton Fire Truck Case To Affect State

ment that the Fire Board held a meeting Tuesday at which time it authorized the appeal to be taken. In the event of an appeal the payment of the judgment will be held up some time and the difference in rate of interest will make a difference in the ultimate payment, should the verdict be upheld. It was stated that there was a difference of $300 a year and should the matter remain in court for a period of years before being settled the two per cent difference in interest charges would amount to a large sum.

Michael Nardone argued that the fire department could not be looked upon as a "public improvement" such as sidewalks or a sewer. He said the Milton Fire District owned no building or no "improvement" and that the only physical thing which was owned was the fire truck and the district could have contracted for that through a fire company to serve the village.

He said the Fire District only rented the fire house and the fire truck of the district was operated by the Milton Engine Company, No. 1, a volunteer organization, and he argued that the situation was different from one where the village owned some "public improvement" such as a sewer or other actual improvement.

The entire question hinged on the meaning of the word "improvement" under the law and Justice Russell said he realized the question was new; one which would require careful consideration and he said he did not feel he could make any decision from the bench. He reserved decision and took the papers in the case.

Mr. Rusk said he had failed to find any law on the question and apparently it was a new issue.

"This is an important decision, one which will affect the entire state of New York," said Justice Russell.

Mayors' Conclave To Start Monday

The annual New York State Mayor's Conference will open in Rochester Monday for a three-day session, closing on Wednesday.

Mayor C. J. Heiselman, president of the Conference, and Mrs. Heiselman left this morning for Rochester.

The mayor will preside over the conference sessions and among the speakers at the conference, will be Sidney G. Lutzin, director of recreation in Kingston, who will talk on Tuesday. His topic will be "A Successful Municipal Recreation Program."

Another local speaker, who will talk on Tuesday is Attorney Henry R. Bright of the local office of the New York city department of law. Mr. Bright will speak on "Condemnation of Property for Municipal Purposes."

The mayor and his wife do not expect to return from Rochester until the latter part of next week.

Approximately 850 mayors and other city officials of New York state are expected to attend the conference.

Camp Will Be Under Receiver

Justice Russell directed that a receiver should be named for Camp Rondout, town of Warwarsing, pending trial of a foreclosure action in order that certain rents might be collected and applied to payment of taxes and other costs.

Application for appointment of a receiver was made by Manuel Warner and the motion was opposed by Benjamin Lonstein.

Warner argued that taxes were due and rents were not being applied to the payments. He also argued there was no insurance on the property and that a receiver should be appointed to collect rents and pay out the money for taxes and other necessary expenditures.

The action pending is a foreclosure action. Mr. Lonstein holds that the mortgage was not properly executed and that Mary Cohen had deeded 4-5 of the property to others prior to the execution of the mortgage and that at the time the mortgage is supposed to have been executed she was on her death-bed. Mr. Lonstein argued that a receiver was being asked for by an undivided one-fifth interest.

After hearing both sides Justice Russell said a receiver should be appointed so that the rents could be collected and applied toward payment of liens. Order submitted.

Promising Cancer Cure Is Reported

Pasadena, Calif., June 8 (AP)—Dr. Robert A. Millikan, chairman of the executive council of the California Institute of Technology, has disclosed a "promising" new attack by science upon cancer.

Dr. Millikan, giving his annual report of institute progress at the commencement exercises, said:

"The cancer research program has had a remarkable chemical development—the further purification of a substance which, on injection into a tumor is an experimental animal, causes the tumor in many cases to shrivel up and disappear."

"The further study of this most promising attack on the cancer scourge is being carried out vigorously."
